Curtis bound over in killings

NEW MADRID — Lindol Curtis, 39, of Portageville, was ordered Friday to stand trial in Circuit Court on two counts of murder, charging him with the shooting deaths on May 7 of his former wife, Mary Curtis, and her mother, Susan Gwaltney. The murders occurred at the rural home of Mrs. Curtis on Portageville Route Three.

The ruling by Magistrate Judge Leo Hedgepeth followed a preliminary hearing in which New Madrid County coroner Gene Clayton and Brenda Underwood, 15- year - old daughter of Mrs. Curtis were called to testify by Prosecuting Attorney Hal E. Hunter Jr.

Curtis remains in the county jail under $100,000 bond.

According to Clayton's testimony, when he arrived at the scene of the shooting, the body of Mrs. Curtis was lying face up in the living room and Mrs. Gwaltney's body was lying face down in a small hallway between the kitchen and living room.

Clayton said he found seven bullet wounds in Mrs. Curtis' body and three bullet wounds in the body of Mrs. Gwaltney, which he said caused their deaths.

Mrs. Curtis was shot in the upper left and right chest, in the area between in the side and in the leg. Mrs. Gwaltney's wounds, according to Clayton, were inflicted in her back below the right shoulder blade.

Miss Underwood testified she was present in the house when the shootings took place and fixed the time at five minutes before 11 p.m.

In addition to Curtis, her mother and grandmother Miss Underwood said her younger brother and sister, Elmer Underwood, 11, and Elaine Underwood, 7, were in bed in a bedroom.

She stated Curtis was talking to her mother in the living room when he called to her grandmother, who was in the kitchen, and to her to come into the living room. He said he wanted to talk to them, Miss Underwood testified.

At that time, she said Curtis had some dirty clothes over his arm. While Curtis and her mother were talking, which she believed was about how many days it had been since they had been in court, she said she saw him move his fingers.

As he stood up, she said he took a gun out which must have been stuck in the dirty clothes and said "Now is as good a time as any.'

She said, "He shot my Mom in the side and she screamed for about 15 seconds."

Miss Underwood said she and her grandmother jumped up and ran. She stated she did not see Curtis shoot her grandmother.

According to Miss Underwood, she first tried to escape through a bedroom window leading to a back porch when she realized the back porch was enclosed. She said while she was attempting to escape she heard a lot more shots fired, and "Mom yelled at me that he was going to get me."

Miss Underwood said she then managed to get out of the house through a back door and ran to a neighbor's house for help.

She further testified on cross examination that earlier that day, about 6:45 p.m., she and her mother had left the house to go to Risco High School where she was to sing at graduation ceremonies.

According to Miss Underwood, her mother stopped the car on the highway where Curtis's car was parked and got out of the car to talk to Curtis for a few minutes.

Miss Underwood said her sister Elaine had told her later that she and her brother had gotten up and opened the bedroom door. Her sister told her they saw Curtis standing over their mother and that Curtis told them to shut the door. She said her sister told her they saw Curtis shoot their mother four times.

Miss Underwood told defense counsel that she had not detected anything unusual about Curtis's behavior prior to the shooting and stated he was acting and talking like he always did. She said her mother had not been drinking and she didn't see any beer cans or whisky bottles around.

Miss Underwood said she did not return to her mother's house after she had gone to get help but that her father, Elmer Underwood, came and got her.

Straw-grown tomatoes

More than just garden dirt goes into the bedding of these tomatoes. Ralph Carroll, 217 Sikes Ave. made big planters from the guts of an old clothes dryer, made a base of straw, then covered the straw with fertilized earth and planted the tomatoes. The plants are about the same size as those in his garden, but the fruit is much larger on the straw- grown plants. (Daily Standard photo)

U.S., Egypt near nuclear agreement

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The presidents of the United States and Egypt agreed Friday on negotiations between their governments to provide American help for a peaceful Egyptian nuclear power program.

A communique President Nixon and President Anwar Sadat signed at the end of Nixon's two-day visit to Egypt said the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission and the Egyptian Ministry of Electricity will conclude a provisional pact this month on the sale of nuclear fuel to Egypt.

That agreement apparently will take effect when the overall document on the sharing of American nuclear technology is concluded.

"Since the atomic age began, nuclear energy has been viewed by all nations as a doubleedged sword — offering opportunities for peaceful applications, but raising the risk of nuclear destruction,'' the communique said.

It said that the United States has made its technology available to other countries under safeguards and added:

"In this context, the two governments will begin negotiation of an agreement for cooperation in the field of nuclear energy under agreed safeguards. Upon conclusion of such an agreement, the United States is prepared to sell nuclear reactors (to Egypt) to generate substantial additional quantities of electric power to support its rapidly growing development needs."

The communique did not specify how Egypt would use American nuclear supplies, but it said that the program is aimed at providing Egypt

Bond favors quick test of new state abortion law

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gov. Christopher S. Bond signed into law Friday a bill regulating abortions in Missouri.

However, Bond urged a rapid constitutional test of provisions in the bill he said were "of questionable constitutionality."

"Particularly alarming to me," he said, is a section requiring that if a fetus is born alive after an attempted abortion, the parents lose all rights to the infant and it becomes a ward of the state.

That provision applies in cases where the abortion was not performed to save the life of the mother.

Bond noted than any unconstitutional section can be severed from the bill, whereas he could not delete sections through a veto.

Asked about other portions of the bill which he considered to be unconstitutional, Bond said he had no idea what the court may decide, but noted a consent provision had been challenged by opponents of the bill.

The governor said his mail, about 1,000 letters on the subject, had been running 15-to-1 in favor of his signing the bill, which he said contained "necessary regulations" on abortions.

The measure, which took effect Friday because of an emergency clause, is the first change in Missouri's abortion statute after the U.S. Supreme Court upheld a U.S. District Court decision in 1973 holding the Missouri law unconstitutional.

The state law had prevented all abortions except to save the life of the mother or to protect her health.

Under the new law, abortions can be permitted at any time to protect the health of the mother or to save her life. Any abortions not necessary to save the life of the mother or protect her health cannot be performed unless the doctor certifies that the fetus is not viable.

Viability is defined in the new law as the stage of fetal development when the life of the unborn child may be continued indefinitely outside the womb by "natural or artificial life-supportive systems."

Regardless of the time period of pregnancy, the mother's and husband's consent is required. If the women is under 18 and unmarried, consent of one parent is required. If she is over 18 and unmarried, only her consent is required.

Under the new law, abortions can be permitted after the first three months of pregnancy if performed in a licensed hospital, by a licensed doctor and are declared to be necessary to protect the mother's life or health. An abortion also could be performed after three months of pregnancy if the doctor believes the fetus would not live.The new provides that in abortions within the first three months, written consent of the husband must be obtained. If the mother is unmarried or under 18, written consent of one parent must be obtained.

Rather than consent and the fact that only licensed doctors can perform an abortion, no other restrictions are placed on abortions in the first three months of pregnancy.

After the first three months, the saline, or salting, method cannot be used.

Opponents of the bill said the only restriction the Supreme Court allowed for the first three months of pregnancy was that abortions had to be performed by a licensed doctor.

The bill also says no fetus aborted alive can be used for scientific experimentation. Anyone who purposefully takes the life of a premature infant aborted alive will be guilty of second degree murder.

Thieves take $635 from 3 motel rooms

Burglars walked off with $635 in cash from three rooms at the Holiday Inn between 3 and 5 p.m. Friday, according to police.

In each case, the occupants of the rooms were at the swimming pool

Edward Boyling of Newark, Ohio, told police he and his family left the room about 3 p.m. to go swimming and, when they returned about 4:30 p.m., $140 in cash was missing from his daughter's purse.

The Boylings were staying in room 301. Police said the door was locked and there was no sign of forcible entry.

The money taken was all in $20 bills. A $5 bill and four $1 bills were left behind.

August P. Mancus of Antioch, Ill., said $420 was taken from his room between 3:30 and 5 p.m.

Taken was $360 in large bills from a money clip and $60 from his wife's purse. The thief left behind $55 in a billfold and a purse belonging to the Mancus children.

Again police said there was no sign of forcible entry.

James B. Holiman of Champaign - Urbana, Ill., said $75 was taken from his billfold between 3:45 and 5 p.m.

Holiman told police the money was in a billfold in a suit coat pocket. The suit coat was still covered with plastic wrapping from the cleaners. There was no sign of forcible entry, police said.

Thieves also broke into the Thomas Richey home, 1036 N. Kingshighway, between 3 and 9 p.m. Thursday, taking a tape recorder valued at $80

Police said entry was gained through a rear window.

Hodge Decker, 112A N. Kingshighway, reported a police monitor was stolen sometime Thursday from a room at Malone Theater.

$100,000 bequest left

Cape Girardeau, Mo. (AP) — A Washington, D.C., man who attended Southeast Missouri State University more than half a century ago has left the school more than $100,000 for a student loan fund, the school said Friday.

Notice of the bequest, a spokesman said, was forwarded this week to school regents by letter from the attorney for the estate of the late Glenn M. Goodman, who died March 20.

Pre-schoolers have funny ideas about what Dad does

This Sunday dad will be a king. But daddies are always a special people, as most pre-schoolers will tell you. In the mind of a child, daddy can accomplish almost any feat. This reporter talked with several pre- schoolers about their Daddies. Answers to "What does your Daddy do at his job?" were amusing and sometimes startling.

Six- year- old Trena Lunn says her daddy fixes broken cars and broken houses. Her father, Larry Lunn, is an adjuster for Farmer's Insurance Group in Sikeston.

Billy Jo Long, four, says his daddy works on buildings too. "Right now he's tearing down Me Ma's house." Bill Long, Billy's father "works on buildings" for Cowan Construction.

One bright- eyed four-year- old boy with a pixy-like grin said "My name is Elwood Kinder the third, my Daddy was the second. He delivers orders to southside and Ford's."

Elwood's nursery school teacher explained that the Kinder family operates Nancy's Sweet Shop. Young Elwood is already learning the tricks of the trade. He says:

"I make cookies with pie dough."

Clint Jobe says his father "takes pipes apart." Clint's Dad, Bill Jobe is owner of Jobe's Heating and Plumbing. When asked if his father is a plumber, Clint replied, "No, he's my daddy!"

Three- year- old Billy Wilson wasn't exactly sure what his father does. He said. "He's big. He has matches."

Matches may not help Billy's father, Brad Wilson who is a Sikeston police officer.

According to Christi Lathom, her father "leaves each morning wearing brown pants and a brown shirt to deliver packages in Puxico."

Don Lathom is an employe of United Parcel Service.

Although Steve Gunter works at Noranda Aluminum Co., his six- year old son, Dale says "Daddy builds roads."

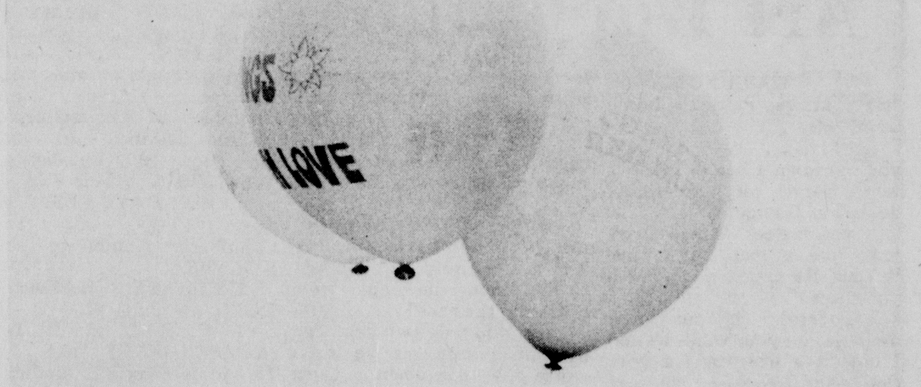

Christina Ho, five- year old daughter of Dr. Grinny Ho has a fairly accurate idea of her father's work. She said:

When a lady comes in with a hurt leg, he puts bunches of medicince on it and a great big statch to hold it all up."

Christina plans to give her Daddy a "Valentine" Sunday morning.

Angela Yates' father may have the best job yet. She said "He makes money" Jerry Yates is an employee of Electro Battery Co.

On Father's Day or any day, kids do say the darndest things.

DEMULITARIZE SUEZ CANAL

One of the world's more notable ironies lies in the benefits which will come to the Soviet Navy from the U. S. operation to reopen the Suez Canal.

Currently, U. S. personnel are busy clearing the Canal of mines and sunken ships so that it can be opened again to traffic which has been blocked since the 1967 Arab- Israeli war. The trouble is, unless it is also demilitarized by international agreement, the Soviets will gain a huge new advantage in their ability to exert military power in the Persian Gulf and Indian Ocean areas. Their Mediterranean and Black Sea fleets will be able to move quickly into those areas via the Suez Canal instead of having to make the long transit around Africa or else come all the way from the Far East.

If it came to actual hostilities, of course, the Canal could be quickly closed again by military action. But barring that extremity, the Soviets will be able to greatly increase their influence on the oil-rich Arab states by their ability to quickly move and supply substantial naval forces through the Canal from their nearby bases.

Deputy Secretary of Defense William P. Clements, Jr. summed it up in a White House briefing:

"It will shorten their lines of supply. It will in a great many ways enhance their position. There is no question about this whatsoever. So if I were to look around the world and pick out who would have the most enthusiasm about opening that canal, I've have to say I believe Russia will be the most enthusiastic."

Since so many fears have been expressed about a naval race in the Indian Ocean, it seems logical to press for an international agreement to ban transit through the Canal by naval vessels of all major powers. United States diplomacy won agreement to open the Canal in the first place, so we should take the initiative toward limiting its use to peaceful purposes.

A 1974 RESOLUTION FOR CONGRESSMEN

This is the year that the members of Congress must take a positive step toward bringing the national budget under control.

The budget has shown a deficit in 36 out of the past 45 years. Federal outlays in 1975 will be almost 100 times the 1925 level, from $3 billion to almost $300 billion in 50 years.

It is time to insist that every Senator and Congressman put the national interest first and local interest second. There is constructive legislation on budget reform now before Congress.

The first step has been taken by the House in the passing of the Budget Control Bill 386 to 23. Now is the time for the Senate to act.

The proposed law will provide better control of federal budget outlays and authority. It will set firm and enforceable spending ceilings that will not be subject to haphazard or easy adjustment.

If we are to halt higher taxes, higher prices and run-away inflation, Congress should overwhelmingly support passage of this vital control legislation.

DRIVERS URGED TO GUARD AGAINST EVENING ATTACKERS

If you're driving alone at night, it's wise to take safety precautions.

The C.I.T. Service Leasing Corporation, New York, cites in a safe- driving program the following tips:

1) Keep your gas tank full and your car in top shape, so you won't be forced to stop in the middle of nowhere.

2) Stick to well-lighted roads in familiar neighborhoods even if it means going out of your way. Avoid being caught in a situation where you have to get out and ask for directions.

3) Lock all car doors and keep the windows shut.

4) You're particularly vulnerable when getting out of or into your car, so park on a well-lighted street or in a parking lot that has an attendant. Before you get into the car, look inside to make sure there's nobody hiding on the back-seat floor.

5) Before you start out, if possible, tell somebody at your destination what route you plan to follow and when you expect to arrive. If you don't show up, they can start looking for you.

6) If you do a lot of driving after dark, you might consider taking a dog along for protection.

7) If your car breaks down, stay inside if possible, and wait for a policeman. If a stranger comes along stay inside and ask him to send help from the nearest service station.

8) If a car pulls across the road and blocks your path, blow your horn for help but stay in the locked car. If you're followed, keep blowing the horn and drive to the nearest police or fire station.

"Don't worry about being late to a party or a meeting," C.I.T. says, "and ignore people who make fun of you for being 'over-cautious.' A woman driving alone at night should think of herself first. Better safe than sorry."

LEAD-TIME A GROWING SHADOW

Lead-time is the interval between the planning and the completion of a project. The more complicated the project the longer the lead-time. With respect to energy, a great many people act as if the factor of lead-time did not exist -- that an oil well can be discovered and brought into production with the dispatch of establishing a popcorn stand.

The president of a leading oil company has warned of the growing menace of the lead-time factor in meeting future energy needs. He says the United States is simply not "keeping up with the game" in finding new sources of oil and gas, constructing new refineries, deep-water terminals and pipelines. By 1980, he declares, the U.S. will need additional manufacturing capacity equivalent to 58 medium-sized refineries, yet only one is currently under construction. Developing oil fields, building refineries, tankers and pipelines requires years. In fact, as the oil company executive stresses, "it takes from between two to ten years to fully develop a major oil field." During the past 10 years, the number of oil wells drilled in the U.S. has dropped 40 percent. Everyday's delay in reversing this trend increases the lead-time that is casting an ever-longer shadow over the prospect of meeting future energy needs. In the petroleum industry, the oil company official warns that reversal of the trend, "... will only be forthcoming if there is a totally different public attitude towards drilling and an economic climate encouraging risk investment."

That harmless sounding expression -- lead-time -- could be the Achilles' heel of our energy-based civilization. Our people had better wake up and learn what it means.

FUNDAMENTAL DIFFERENCE

Recent news dispatches present an interesting comparison between the state-run economy of the USSR and the nominally free enterprise economy of the United States. One dispatch from the Soviet reports on the failure of the government managers of Russia's consumer goods industry to meet the consunmer's needs. Outdated machinery has slowed up production. Also, Soviet plants are turning out "... products that are not appropriate to current demands."

Another news release summarizes the views expressed by a representative of a large trading stamp company, Ms. Elaine Pitts of Sperry & Hutchinson Co. Commenting on business attitudes, she said: "Consumers are just beginning to learn they have a voice ... You not only listen but respond with positive programs." Companies in a competitive free market must either please consumers, in terms of price and product quality, or face bankruptcy. There is no passing the buck. In the U. S., companies that promote and advertise their wares and live up to the obligation of maintaining high - volume, low- cost merchandising of quality goods are assured of success.

Contrast this situation with that in the USSR. There the consumer is a bystander. One government agency criticizes another government agency for, what it considers, a failure to meet certain consumer needs. The problem will be resolved between the various government planners, managers and employees. A few heads may roll, but no company goes broke. A state-run enterprise listens, not to the voice of consumers, but to the voices of the government hierarchy. The difference is fundamental. It is the difference between capitalism and socialism -- between abundance and scarcity.

ART LINKLETTER FIGHTS AGAINST DRUGS

"Drugs at My Door Step" is a moving book about a very personal tragedy.

Art Linkletter, the well-known entertainer, was preparing to address the U.S. Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Colo., when a phone call from his son changed his life.

His daughter, 20, was dead. She had jumped from the window of her sixth floor apartment while under the influence of LSD. "It wasn't suicide; she wasn't herself," an anguished Linkletter told the Los Angeles Times the next day. "It was murder; she was murdered by the people who manufacture and sell LSD."

In this account of one man's fight against drug abuse, Mr. Linkletter tells how he channeled his initial reaction of anger and vengeance against drug pushers into a search for answers about drug abuse.

He learned that there are as many "solutions" to the drug problem as there are individuals who abuse drugs. He modified his once stongly-held belief that law enforcement alone could solve the drug problem. And he observed that "drug education" in itself may be ineffective if it is not presented in a factual manner relevant to the lifestyle of today's young people.

In his book, Mr. Linkletter describes how, shortly after his daughter's death, he addressed the directors' meeting of the NAM. Shortly afterward the Association began its own campaign against drug abuse in industry.

Mr. Linkletter has written a provocative, informative, and very readable account of the drug problem we face today. It's a "must" for every parent, teenager, teacher or employer.

WASHINGTON — "Hey, Marge, Patrick's home from college."

'Patrick, Patrick, my, you've grown a beard. It looks very, very, very grown up, doesn't it, George?"

' Yes, it does. It makes you look like a real man. Here, Patrick, let me help you with your bags."

"Patrick, I put new draperies on your windows and I bought a new rug for your floor. And I cooked a big roast beef for you.

"Why don't you take a nice bath and we'll all have dinner and you can tell us all about school."

"It's good to have you home, son. The house has been a morgue without you. I had the pool table recovered, maybe we can have a few games this week?"

"He's tired, George. Let him go upstairs and get cleaned up. You seem so thin, Patrick. We're going to have to fatten you up."

"How are you fixed for cash, son? Here's 20 bucks. You probably want to go out and have a few beers with your pals."

"Maybe he'd like to have a party, George. He could invite over all his friends from high school."

"Sure thing, Marge, and we could play some tennis. I think I can still beat you, son."

"Go upstairs, Patrick, and make yourself at hime. My, it's good to see him, isn't it, George?"

"You can say that again, Marge."

ONE WEEK LATER

'Hello, George. Was it sweltering at the office?"

"Yup. Where's Patrick?"

"He's up in his room sleeping."

"At 6 o'clock in the evening?"

' I think he got in around 4 this morning."

"He gets in at 4 every morning. What are we running around here, a Playboy Club for teen-agers?"

"Now, George, don't get angry again. He had a very rough semester and he's just trying to relax."

"I had a rough semester, too, but I don't stay out until 4 in the morning. Did you talk to him about the empty wine bottles in the car?"

' He said only two belonged to him. I must say he looks worse now than when he came home from school."

"And what about a job? Did you ask him if he was looking for a job?"

"He said he's been looking, George."

"I'll bet. You know there are very few employment offices open at 8 o'clock at night."

'Well, he says he's been trying very hard but no one wants to hire him."

' Why should they with that damn beard? If he shaved it off and looked presentable, maybe he could dind something."

"Hush, he might hear you!"

"I couldn't care less if he heard me or not. He needs someone to kick his rear in I worked in the summer when I went to college."

TWO WEEKS LATER

"Have you seen Patrick today Marge?"

"No, but I saw him in the kitchen yesterday with his pals. They ate everything in the icebox."

"It figures. When does he go back to school?"

"Not until September."

"Good grief. You mean he's going to be here two (ital) more (unital) months?"

"It seems like a long time, George, but July and August will go very fast."

' I'm not too certain. It seems when they're away time just whistles by. But when they're home it doesn't move at all."

JACK ANDERSON SAYS: Rodino Panel Relies on FBI

WASHINGTON — At the forthcoming impeachment hearings, the case against President Nixon will be based largely upon the work of the FBI, which uncovered 90 per cent of the Watergate conspiracy.

This will be awkward for the President who has always championed the FBI. After he graduated from Duke University, he even tried to become an FBI agent.

Those who favor impeachment consider it good strategy, therefore, to stress their reliance upon the FBI. Contrary to the public impression, it wasn't investigative reporters but FBI agents who dug out most of the Watergate facts.

The White House tried to head off the FBI investigation by obstructing the agents, throwing out false leads and crying national security. At White House instigation, former CIA director Richard Halms and deputy director Vernon Walters asked the FBI to lay off sensitive Watergate matters, falsely claiming it would jeopardize CIA operations.

But the FBI pressed doggedly ahead. Early in 1973, the top FBI brass checked upon the investigation to make sure it was being handled properly. Robert E. Beghardt, who headed the General Investigative Division, reported back confidentially to Associate Director W. Mark Felt on Feb. 23, 1973:

"The handling of the Watergate investigation from the headquearters level through the field operation level was done in accordance with procedures, both administrative and investigative, that are customarily employed in any major investigative effort by the FBI.

"Among cases handled in the recent past in which similar procedures were followed are: the assassination of Martin Luther King; Capitol bombing, March 1, 1971; and major kidnapping cases such as the Barbara Jane Mackle case."

Most of the agents who developed the Watergage case, meanwhile, are still doing the sluething for the special prosecutors.

DEATHBED PROMISE: Friends who are close to the human Richard Nixon tell us he faithfully kept a promise he made to Dwight Eisenhower on the late President's deathbed.

Two days before Ike died, President Nixon paid his last visit to the old general at Washington's Walter Reed Army Hospital. "Dick," said the dying Eisenhower, "there's one thing I want you to promise me. I want you to be as good to Lyndon Johnson as he has been to me."

Nixon gave his word. Our sources say he squelched moves by his subordinates to hunt for scandals in the Johnson administration and use them to embarrass the Democrats in the 1970 and 1972 elections.

"Would you go after Johnson?" he would ask. If he thought the revelations might hurt Johnson personally, Nixon would say no.

When Johnson died on Jan. 22, 1973, President Nixon ordered his full Cabinet to attend special services. "Earlier today," directed a January 23 memo to all Cabinet members, "your office was contacted with the request from the President that you attend the Rotunda services for former President Johnson ..."

EPIDEMIC OF PILLS: The federal crackdown on heroin apparently has caused America's drug users to turn to pills and powders meant for medical purposes.

This is the import of new figures submitted to Capitol Hill by the Customs Service. The figures are based o Customs seizures, which often reflect the American drug scene more accurately than do drug arrests and convictions.

The new figures show that through April, heroin seizures have declined almost 68 per cent during fiscal 1974, compared with the same period a year ago. Opium confiscation is down 83 per cent.

Yet during the same period, the seizures of barbiturates, pep pills and other medical drugs have increased a staggering 371 per cent.

U. S. drug companies, large and small, must report drug sales to the federal government. To get around this, the drug companies simply are shipping the pills out of the country to foreign wholesalers whose sales aren't subject to U.S. inspection.

These wholesalers ship the drugs to smugglers below the border or in the West Indies, who bring them clandestinely back into the United States in crate- size lots.

Footnote: The ethical pharmaceutical industry insists it can't control what foreign wholesalers do with the drugs. The U.S. companies, however, ship huge amounts of drugs out of the country, knowing the amounts far exceed the needs for medicinal purposes.

BASH FOR BIBLE: Interior Secretary Rogers Morton threw a bash the other night for retiring Sen. Alan Bible, D-Nev., and Rep. Julia Butler Hansen, D-Wash., at the stately Arlington House.

Outdoor torch lighting, wooden steps to the patio and other frills were installed at the taxpayers' expense. For the Arlington House, a Virginia estate, is run by the National Parks Service.

Food and liquor for the 100 guests was paid from a special Parks Service "discretionary fund," from souvenir sales. The fund has been set aside for promotion, entertainment and the like. An official spokesman said Morton's extravaganza cost $2,000. An unofficial source said it was closer to $18,000.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

This Year's Aristocracy: Hard Hats New Wage Rates Streaking Toward $500-$600 a Week -- Before Overtime

WASHINGTON — The new society is sooner than you think. The hard hats are seeing to it. This is their year -- the year of the leapfrog. For in many sections of this nation unionized construction workers are getting pay- fringe raises up to $145 a week per man.

Unions are "settling" one-year contracts which bring plumbers, welders, electricians, et al., upward of $500 a week. That's before overtime.

"It's crazy," said one high government official, himself such a good friend of organized labor that he was mentioned as a possible Secretary of Labor. "It's wild. It's bankrupting."

And he's among the calm observers.

In Salem, Ore., for example, the welders have just signed a contract giving them an hourly raise of $3.60 over a base pay of $9.30 an hour. That's a $144 increase per week per man working on industrial and power projects.

In San Francisco, the plumbers have just won a lump sum cash- fringe hike of $2.37 an hour -- a jump of $94.80 per man for a 40- hour week. And that's on the past base pay— fringe cost of $11 an hour.

In another California city, the pay increase in the new one- year contract is $2.80 an hour in a one- year "agreement" -- the equivalent of a $112 weekly raise.

In Alaska, the Teamsters are demanding a $140 weekly increase for pipeline-relatedwork.

Other contractors signing up for about $1-an- hour increase per worker consider themselves lucky. That's $40 a week. But word from the West is speeding east. Strikes are busting out all over since it's June.

The federal mediation service has asked for some $3 million additional to hire 24 new conciliators -- and say the construction industry will keep them busy.

Could be. It's not only money the local unions ask for -- they demand prepaid car insurance, legal services and double time for overtime. In some areas this could bring wage- fringe labor construction costs to $30 an hour (unless it's Saturday or Sunday work which could go triple time). On that basis it would be cheaper to air- condition the Sahara and stake out there.

And there are no controls. Chances are there won't be. So the local building and construction trades union business agents and presidents are heeding the call of the wild -- the comparatively new rank and file. These young fellows for some three years have been under the control and reasoning of the Construction Industry Stabilization Committee (CISC). It's dead. No one even gave it a fine funeral. They just hung crepe paper on its door.

CISC was a tripartite talk-it- over council which approved or disapproved new wage rates. On it sat national union chiefs, the representatives of the $136 billion (annually) construction industry and movernment men. They met regularly. Now its brilliant young chairman Prof. D. Q. Mills, is going home to M. I. T.

He'll be upstream from the Dean, Harvard's returning progeny, John Dunlop. They tried to keep the dam from breaking. But you can't mix concrete with just a mixer. They have now run out of concrete -- controls. And now John Dunlop's Cost of Living Council headquarters is a doleful place. In effect, they're putting the files in order. They're set to dispatch them to the archives. And another phase of Prof. Dunlop's life goes into history.

All "phases" and "stages" are gone. Only a mere shadow is left of the once- powerful pay and price boards.

Petroleum is still controlled by the energy office. And Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Cap Weinberger is jawboning with leaders of the "health" industry in a futile effort to keep down costs which are rocketing at a rate twice that of the consumer Price Index (CPI). The San Francisco nurses' strike and the coming New York City hospital contract crisis will smash what chances Weinberger has to keep down the awesome cost of illness and accident.

Elsewhere there is talk of a "Temporary (or permanent) National Commission on Supplies and Shortages." There's a bill wandering around somewhere on the Hill which would create such a committee. Prof. Dunlop can have its chairmanship if he wishes. Then he could attempt to crack prices - and thus tamp down wages -- by rushing surpluses into a high cost area or tightening supplies in another.

But it's too late for this year of the leapfrog. The new society has it all for itself. Who else can afford it?

Ann Landers

Giggling erupts at wrong times

Dear Ann Landers: If you think I'm crazy, please tell me. I am 16 years old and have been dating for nearly two years, so I'm not a shy beginner with boys.

My problem is that whenever I'm with this guy that I really care for and he begins to turn me on, I start to laugh. This giggling at the most inopportune time started about six months ago, and now it's on the verge of ruining our relationship Every time he takes me in his arms or kisses me, I bust out laughing. It has nothing to do with anything being funny and I don't know why I do it. What's wrong with me and what can I do to help myself? — No Laughing Matter.

Dear No: Laughter can be an automatic response to embarrassment. It can also be a release for repressed or pent-up emotions.

In your case, it's probably a combination of guilt (for getting turned on) and an unconscious mechanism that protects you from going further. A girl who laughs when a guy turns her on is sure to turn him OFF.

Dear Ann Landers: Yesterday a tiny baby was found abandoned in our city. The newspaper printed the story and published a picture of that adorable infant.Within hours they were deluged with calls from people who wanted to adopt him. And this is why I am writing. I want to say a few words to girls who don't want their babies and leave them in bus depots, airports, garbage cans, etc.

In most states an abandoned child cannot be legally placed for adoption from one year to 18 months after the initial court hearing. The law (which is very unjust to the child) is set up to protect the parents' rights by giving them plenty of time to come forward and reclaim the child. During this time, the child is placed in a foster home.

What I am trying to say is this: If you abandon a child he will be deprived of a permanent home for the first year or 18 months of his life. This same law deprives couples who want to adopt a child in infancy. There are thousands of couples who want tiny babies and cannot have them because of this nonsensical law.

So please, mothers for your child's sake - if you don't want him (or her), contact an adoption agency and they will (in strictest confidence) make the proper arrangements. The child will then not have to stay in a foster home for what may be the most important months of his life. — A Concerned Social Worker.

Dear C.S.W.: Thank you for performing a tremendous service, not only to mothers and their unwanted babies, but to the couples who can give these infants the love they need. I'm sure this is the first time millions of people were set straight on this legal booby trap.

Dear Ann Landers: After having had my tummy patted three times this week and being asked such questions as, "Is there anything in there to brag about yet?" and' "When are you going to put something in the oven?" I decided to write to Ann Landers.

My husband and I have been trying for four years to have a family and it burns me up when people are so crude. I simply refuse to apologize for being childless; nor do I think it's anyone's business that we are trying. What should I say? —Temper Mounting.

Dear Temper: When clods make crude remarks and ask nunuvyerbizzniz- type questions, the best answer is NO answer. Just a long, incredulous look which can speak louder than any combination of scathing words.

Arnie's back

MAMARONECK, N.Y. (AP) — Arnold Palmer, calling on the half-remembered magic that once was his alone, charged out of the past with a 70 and shouldered his way into a share of the second-round lead Friday in the 74th United States Open Golf Championship.

The 44-year-old Palmer, trailed by a massive gallery of the still-faithful army, put together a two-round total of 143, three over par for two trips through the trees, traps, trouble and subtle terror that make up the 6,961-yard Winged Foot Golf Club course.

"I'm not interested in what is leading the golf tournament today," he said. "I'm interested in the end of the tournament. It was not my goal to lead at the end of 36 holes.

"I just wanted to be in the right position."

The right position turned out to be a tie for the top spot with gritty little Gary Player of South Africa, the first-round leader, Hale Irwin and former PGA champion Ray Floyd.

Player, the Masters champion who has his sights set on a one-year sweep of all the game's major titles, had to mount an incredible rally— birdies on four of his last eight holes—to retain a share of the top spot after blowing six strokes to par on the first six holes he played.

He finished with a 73.

Irwin, whose seven-year pro career has shown steady improvement, matched par 70 despite a poor finish while Floyd had to chip in three times for a wildly erratic 71.

A pair of youngsters, Tom Kite and Tom Watson—each 24, each in his second year on the pro tour and each seeking his first professional victory—were just one shot back halfway through this, the most prestigious of all the world's golf championships. Kite had a 70 and Watson a 71.

While Palmer and Player remained among the leaders, some of the game's other big guns fired and fell back.

Defending champion Johnny Miller took a horrendous, quadruple-bogey seven on the parthree seventh hole—it took him four strokes to get out of a bunker—had a 75, a 151 total and wrote himself out of title contention.

"I'll be yukking it up the next two rounds, just having fun," said Miller, the sensation of the pro tour with five victories already this season.

Jack Nicklaus struggled to a 74—149, nine shots over par and six behind.

Tom Weiskopf had a 73—149. Millionaire Bruce Crampton took 77—149.

Their problems were nothing when compared with those of Lee Trevino, England's Tony Jacklin and Billy Casper, who scored the first of his two U.S. Open triumphs on this same course 15 years ago.

All three missed the cut; it took a score of 153 to qualify for the final 36 holes. Casper had 76—156. Jacklin took 76— 154. Trevino struggled to a 78— 156.

"I just didn't play well enough to handle this course," said Trevino, who left immediately for his home in El Paso, Tex. "It's the hardest course I've ever seen."

While the scores remained high—the three-over-par figure was the highest to lead after 36 holes since the 1955 U.S. Open— the course played about one shot easier than it had the day before.

There were four subpar rounds. Bert Yancey had 69—145. Frank Beard was 69—146. Larry Ziegler improved 10 shots, from 78 to 68. Hubert Green, a three-time winner this season, improved an incredible 14 shots, from 81 to 67.

By contrast, Player was the only man able to match par in the exceptionally high scoring of the first round.

(AP) — Top second - round scores Friday in the 74th United States Open Golf tournament on the 6,961-yard par-70 Winged Foot Golf Club course:

Arnold Palmer	73-70-143
Gary Player	70-73-143
Hale Irwin	73-70-143
Ray F.oyd	72-71-143
Tom Kite	74-70-144

Son chip off the old block

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Kelly McKeon is a chip off the old block at the age of 12.

Like his pop, Manager Jack McKeon of the Kansas City Royals, Kelly lives and breathes baseball, knows the language from A to Z, is a pretty fair judge of players..m.and chews tobacco.

"I've chewed since I was 6," said Kelly, a Royals ball boy. "I can't right now 'cause I got these braces on my teeth. One time I swallowed a great big chunk. It made me sick."

McKeon baseball activities became a father and son act back when Kelly was 5 and Jack was a scout for the Minnesota Twins. When he was 6, Kelly strode through the dugout after a pitcher walked a couple of guys and told his dad, then manager at High Point, N.C.:

"Skip, you better get somebody warmin' up. That guy's had it."

Kelly was a pretty good observer at that age, too. He asked Jack:

"How come the catcher always runs down to first with the batter?"

Jack kept a little black book on batters and pitchers. Kelly had to have one, too.

Kelly resembles his pop in another way. He likes to argue with the umpire. Once when Jack was manager at Omaha, Kelly stormed onto the field and confronted the man in blue.

"I told that umpire that it wasn't a strike," Kelly explained. "I really told him. What happened? He tossed me out of there.

"When dad gets in an argument, I'm always afraid he'll get in a fight. I walways drop my glove on the ground so I'll be ready to go out there and help him. I always think my dad is gonna punch him.

"You know, my dad belted a pitcher once."

Kelly had a couple of his greatest momemts last season when the Oakland A's were in town.

"I told 'em twice Campy (Bert Campaneris, A's shortstop) was gonna try to steal," Kelly said. "I could tell by his body movements. Campy went, and they got him both times."

Kelly, a straight A student at Burlington, N.C., takes batting practice by himself but joins the Royals in fielding practice.

He's quite an athlete. He plays linebacker in football and watches the pros so much he has learned how to blitz. He isn't a great scorer in basketball but "I steal the ball a lot." He was runnerup for bantam bowler of the year in North Carolina.

Rick Blankenship of Security National Bank steps on third base safely ahead of throw to Optimist Club third baseman Bruce Lawrence in Senior Babe Ruth action Thursday night. Security manager Jim Saulter (back) stands ready to wave Blankenship on home if the throw is missed. Optimist won 7-6.

Littell, Smith improve season ERA records

Steve Coulson of Fisk dropped four points in his batting average, while Mark Littell of Gideon and Randy Smith of Arbyrd improved on their earned run averages in the pitching department last week.

Coulson was batting .277 for West Haven in the Class AA Eastern League but collected only six hits in 24 times at bat and dropped to .273. Gary Blaylock of Malden continued to be inactive.

Littell lost one game last week while winning none for Omaha in the AAA American Association but nevertheless lowered his ERA from 2.30 a week ago to 2.26. He has a season record of 2-4.

Smith won one and lost none last week and has a season record of 6-2 for Salinas in the Class A California League and lowered his ERA to 2.89 from 3.12 a week ago.

NFL may strike; could close camp

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Football League Players Association said Friday the union is quite serious about a strike and will do all it can legally to prevent rookies and free agents from going to training camp.

"We hope we can avoid it (a strike)," Ed Garvey, union executive director, told a news conference. "We don't think it is good for the players, the owners or the fans."

He said a strike, if it comes, would begin July 1, a few days before the training camps open.

Garvey, with Kermit Alexander, NFLPA vice president and Philadelphia Eagle defensive back, and George Burman, former Washington Redskins center and economics consultant to the union, talked to newsmen about the three days of meetings in New York with the NFL Management Council, the owners' bargaining unit, that ended Thursday.

"We really thought when we left this room last week, they were going to give us counter proposals," said Garvey, referring to a meeting held in Washington last week. "But they just sat there. They refused to give us any counter proposals.

"Unless we get a response, the meetings scheduled for next week seem futile."

The players and owners are scheduled to meet in Washington Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday on the 63 contract demands the union made. Originally, the association made 57 demands and then added 33 more. The group rewrote them, consolidating the 90 into 63.

The major thrust of the union's demands are the so-called nine "freedom issues" which essentially would give the players the opportunity to move from one team to another after his contract expired.

Lions, Pizza Inn lash opponents

The Lions ran over Legion 12-9 and Pizza Inn whipped the J.C's 7-2 in the National league Friday night.

In the first game of the night King outpitched Copeland to pick up the win for the Lions as Winfield and Weathers banged out doubles and King hit a two bagger for the losers.

Each team had a homerun as Longstreet hit a circuit clout for Lions and Tope hit a four bagger for Legion

Longstreet and Winfield were the leading hitters for Lions with two hits apiece. Legion had only three hits distributed between three different players.

In the second game of the night Blow of Pizza Inn held the J.C's to only one hit and was backed by an eight hit attack to pick up the victory. Malcolm obsorbed the loss.

Pollar, Lasoter and Lane had two hits apiece for Pizza Inn. Fraser had the only hit for J.C's.

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Notre Dame University football officials say they have apparently lost the services of starting guard Steve Quehl because of a serious leg injury.

The 6-foot-4, 240-pound Cincinnati, Ohio, native, was injured while driving a truck for a construction company when the transmission exploded. He suffered a compound fracture of one leg and will be in a cast for 10 weeks.

Doctors say they expect the injury to heal with no lasting effects, but it appears unlikely he will be able to play football this year.

What's the law?

The case of the hobbled pedestrian

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Roscoe never went south for the winter because he had plenty of winter right where he lived. In fact, he concluded he had too much of it one day while walking past a supermarket. He slipped and fell on a natural accumulation of ice and snow on the sidewalk and broke one of his legs.

Hobling off to court, Roscoe sued the owner of the supermarket for his injury.

"He hasn't got a leg to stand on," responded the supermarket owner in court. "It's not my fault because it snows. What's more, I don't even own the sidewalk. The city does. Consequently, if Roscoe wants to sue somebody, he's got to sue the city."

"That's not so." insisted Roscoe. "There's an ordinance that requires abutting property owners to remove all snow and ice from in front of their premises. And," concluded Roscoe, "since the supermarket violated that ordinance. that's the premise under which the supermarket is liable."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE. would you make the supermarket owner pay gobling Roscoe for his injuries?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that there is no common- law duty on abutting property owners to remove the natural accumulation of snow and ice on city- owned sidewalks in front of their premises. City ordinances requireing such removal, noted the judge, are intended for the benefit of the city and not for the protection of individual travelers.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture recently announced that specifications applicable to bale packaging materials for cotton tendered to Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) under its cotton loan program will be continued for the 1974 crop of cotton. (On November 21, 1973, the Department announced CCC specifications would be continued for the 1974 crop).

This action will provide the same specifications for the 1975 crop as will apply to the 1974 crop, augmented or amended by any additions or changes as may be recommended by the cotton industry bale packaging committee and approved by CCC.

Department officials noted that the action announced recently is consonant with testimony before the House Cotton Subcommittee, at its hearings held April 22 through 29. As a followup to the hearings, it is expected that a joint government- industry study group will be established to give further consideration to some of the items covered at the hearings. One area for further study is whether the cotton industry could maintain adequate bale packaging standards in the absence of CCC specifications.

Timing of this announcement will provide manufacturers and suppliers of bale packaging materials with ample lead time in obtaining adequate supplies for the 1975 crop of cotton.

Bootheel wheat ready for harvest

Farmers penalized for marketing wheat with onions and garlic

THOMAS A. BROWN
Area Agronomy Specialist

BLOOMFIELD — In travelling around over this area this spring, I have observed that many wheat fields are heavily infested with wild onions, garlic, and vetch this season. Present market indications are that wheat producers can expect a pretty heavy price penalty when such wheat is sold.

Many farmers have sprayed their wheat fields for wild onion and garlic control this season, and some fields have been treated to rid them of vetch. Many fields have not been treated, however, and it is not difficult to distinguish these fields. Not only are these fields a problem this year, but the onions, garlic, and vetch can be expected to be worse next year. In addition, vetch seed, when plowed under deeply can be expected to stay viable for years and come up when they are turned up sufficiently shallow. Consequently this can be expected to be a long-term problem if neglected.

Wheat can be kept from grading garlicky by spraying with the ester formulation of 2, 4-D at the rate of three-fourths pound acid equivalent per acre preferably between the tillering and jointing stages. You can spray as late as the boot stage if necessary; however, this treatment can result in slight injury to wheat, so it is best to spray before the wheat joints. This treatment simply knocks the onions and garlic down and prevents the development of seed and aerial bulblets (if treated sufficiently early), but it will not completely eradicate the onion or garlic plants. At least three applications of a much heavier dosage of 2,4-D are required for eradication.

Vetch can be controlled by spraying with the amine formulation of 2,4-D at the rate of three-fourths pound acid equivalent per acre. This treatment should also be applied preferably between the tillering and jointing stages.

Various broadleaf weeds can also be controlled in wheat by spraying with 2,4-D amine. Pre-harvest treatments for this purpose should be made from the milk stage to maturing of the grain. This will require 1.0 to 1.5 pounds acid equivalent per acre depending upon the weed species present and their condition of growth. The use of 2,4-D should be avoided during the seedling stage (until plants are four inches tall) and from the boot until after the milk stage.

Of course, it is too late to spray wheat for any of these weed pests this season. Due to the severity of the onion, garlic, and vetch infestations this season, it is hoped that calling attention to these problems while they can still be observed this season will help farmers to cope with these problems in future years.

Additional information pertaining to these weed pests and their control may be obtained upon request at your County University of Missouri Extension Center.

Herbicides suggested for bean weed control

By THOMAS A. BROWN, JR.

Weeds are beginning to be a problem in some soybean fields, and several farmers are wondering what herbicide to apply as an early post emergence weed control treatment for this crop.

Either Dinoseb (Dinitro) or Naptalam + Dinoseb (Dyanap or Ancrack) can be used as an early post emergence weed control treatment for beans. Dinoseb will give good control of cocklebur, morning glory, pigweed, ragweed, smartweed, spiny sida (teaweed), lambsquarter, and velvetleaf and fair control of giant foxtail, crabgrass, barnyardgrass, and fall panicum. Naptalam + Dinoseb will give good control of giant foxtail, crabgrass barnyardgrass, jimsonweed, pigweed, spiny sida, velvetleaf, and carpetweed and fair control of cocklebur, morning glory, ragweed, smartweed, lambsquarter, and fall panicum. Either of these treatments should be used only when a flush of weeds comes up shortly after planting. Both are contact herbicides and are effective only against susceptible weeds that are up at the time of application.

Both Dinitro and Naptalam + Dinitro should be applied when soybean plants are in the cotyledon (first leaf) stage but before the first true leaves open to expose the terminal bud. Crop injury may be expected if the application is made when the temperature exceeds 85 degrees F., and results are less effective if application is made when the temperature is below 70 degrees F. The time interval for this treatment is short and varying degrees of crop injury may result if the bean crop did not come up uniformly.

The wheat crop now being harvested has been affected by one of the heaviest disease infestations experienced during recent years. A number of diseases have infested wheat this season including Glume Blotch, Barley Yellow Dwarf, Septoria Leaf Blotch, and Rhiztonia Blight. Wheat yields have been badly reduced by these diseases in some cases. Considerable concern among farmers is being caused by this problem especially with respect to the possible carryover of these diseases into next year's wheat crop.

Most of these diseases live over from one season to the next on crop residues; therefore, they can be expected to be a problem next year unless steps are taken to control them. Consequently, it is very important that farmers begin to think about practices that they can use to control these diseases inasmuch as is possible. Some practices thatt will help to control these diseases are as follows:

1. Save seed from disease-free fields or fields showing the least disease symptoms.
2. Practice sanitation including a thorough plowing under of all crop residue.
3. Practice crop rotation. Separate next years wheat as far as possible from the preceding wheat crop.
4. Use clean seed. Remove all trash and light shrivelled kernels.
5. Treat seed before planting with a fungicide to eliminate disease organisms from seed surface and to protect against soil- borne organisms.

Additional information pertaining to the wheat disease problem may be obtained from your county University of Missouri Extension Center.

Crop wheat county loan rate increased

The U. S. Department of Agriculture has announced increases in 1974 crop wheat county loan rates by major wheat producing areas.

The 1974 national average loan rate of $1.37 per bushel, announced August 16, 1973, is 12 cents above the 1973 national average loan rate of $1.25 per bushe.

An increase in the loan rate will be effective in every county. It will, however, vary by production area to reflect differences in export demand and transportation costs. As in the past, protein premiums will be added to the loan rates. For example, No. 1 hard red spring wheat in North Dakota with 14.5 per cent protein would add nine cents to the basic loan rates.

County loan rates in the upper plains states, representing the hard red spring wheat producing area, will generally average eight to nine cents above those in effect for 1973. In the middle and southern plains area, representing hard red winter wheat producing areas, county loan rates will generally average nine to 10 cents above 1973. For the most part, the southern plains area has maintained a strong price structure relative to the northern plains since it is the principal supply area for the heavy increases in wheat exports through the gulf ports.

Increased transportation costs have had a relatively minor effect in the soft red wheat area of Illinois, Indiana, and Ohio, and have been more than off-set by strong demand for this class of wheat. Hence, county loan rates in this area will generally average 16 to 17 cents above 1973. Similarly, the county loan rates in the pacific northwest, representing the white wheat producing area and tributary areas of hard red winter and spring wheats, will be 12 to 17 cents above 1973.

Copies of county rates are being sent to State Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) Offices. Copies also are available in the ASCS Grain Division, Room 5741-S, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. 20250.

DICK JAMES FESTIVAL ANNOUNCES 1974 PLANS

ROUND TOP, Tex. (AP) — The fourth James Dick International Piano Festival-Institute will take place June 6-July 7. Its performances are free to the public.

This year there will be performances and seminars by Maureen Forrester, Canadian contralto; Jerzy Marchwinski, Polish accompanist; the Cleveland String Quartet, and the Houston Symphony.

Vladimir Viardo, 1973 winner of the Van Cliburn International Piano Competition, is scheduled to perform.

Producers check disaster payment

Producers in Scott County are checking thoroughly into the disaster payment provisions of the 1974 feed grain, wheat, and cotton programs administered by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS).

"We want to do all we can to explain how producers become eligible for prevented planting and low yield payments," said Kenneth E. Vowels Executive Director of the Scott County ASCS office. Prevented planting means that the farmer is unable to plant because a severe natural disaster striking at planting time prevented him from planting. Low yield is when when a disaster seriously affects the potential yield of a crop after planting.

In the case of wheat and feed grains, if the producer is prevented by a disaster from planting an acreage of annual nonconserving crop at least equal to the sum of his wheat and feed grain allotments, he may qualify for a prevented planting payment.

The cotton provisions of the disaster program differ from the foregoing provisions. To qualify for payment the producer of upland cotton must only be prevented from planting cotton itself.

Low yield payments apply only to program crops of wheat, corn, grain sorghum, barley and cotton that have been planted, but a natural disaster such as jail, excessive rainfall, extended drought, or flood totally destroys the crop or reduces the potential yield substantial below normal.

Vowels emphasized that if a disaster prevents a farmer from planting his crop acreages or severly damages a planted program crop acreage after planting, he should immediately report it to the ASCS office. Participation in these programs is open to all farmers regardless of race, color, creed, sex, or national origin, and an intention to participate must be filed by July 15 to be accepted.

Farmers still benefit from sign-up

"Although there are no farm set-aside payments, farmers can still benefit from sign-up this year," Kenneth Vowels, executive director of the Scott County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS), said recently.

Farmer sign-ups and certification can be completed in one step. Crops must be certified before harvest, and the cutoff date is July 15, Vowels said.

Acreage certification in the wheat, feed grain and cotton programs make farmers eligible for benefits that include eligiblity for commodity loans and facility loans.

The program also offers a new disaster payment provision. The Department of Agriculture, under certain conditions, will make payments for prevented planting and for yield losses due to bad weather or other natural disasters. Disaster payments cover wheat, feed grain and upland cotton only.

Farmers who anticipate a low yield on feed grains, wheat, or cotton should visit the county ASCS office in Benton and file an application for disaster credit.

Dinner honors Stoddard Co. conservationist

Harry Barker, of Dexter Route Three, district conservationist off Stoddard County, was honored June 8 with a dinner at Two Tony's Restaurant.

Howard Taylor, toastmaster, reviewed Barker's career in the soil conservation service which began in 1942. Taylor said Barker was indeed "Mr. Conservation", stating his dedication and belief in the soil conservation program "were inspirational to those associated with him."

Barker was also presented several gifts.

Farm Safety Week to be July 25-31

CHICAGO — President Richard M. Nixon has proclaimed that July 25-31, 1974 shall be dedicated to the observance of National Farm Safety Week. This marks the 31st consecutive year in which this annual national safety activity co-sponsored by the National Safety Council (NSC) and the U. S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) has been observed.

Farm Safety Week was initiated during World War II to attack accident losses that were impairing crucial agricultural production. Thus, the two-fold purpose of Farm Safety Week is to call attention to major accident problems that drain human and economic resources in agricultural production, and to suggest preventive measures which can be applied to reduce these losses.

Accidents claimed the lives of about 6,000 farm and ranch residents last year. Approximately half of these were victims of motor- vehicle mishaps. Another one-fourth were in accidental agricultural work deaths. About 500,000 farm residents suffered disabling injuries last year.

The cost of these accidents, including farm fires, totaled $2.75 billion in 1973. Losses that farm and ranch people can ill-afford.

About one-fourth of all work- related injuries reported in a recent NSC ten-state farm accident survey were attributed to falls. Work falls often occur in the use of farm equipment - especially tractors, wagons, and combines. But not all falls are work- related. Many additional falls occur right around the house and yard - on ladders, down stairs, on slippery surfaces, and over hidden obstacles.

Consequently, NSC and USDA are emphasizing prevention of farm falls in this year's observance to help reduce farm deaths and injuries. And agricultural communicators, farm and rural youth organizations, rural safety leaders, agri- business, extension, and other community leaders are being asked to cooperate in this year's effort to reduce farm falls.

The National Safety Council, based in Chicago, is a nongovernmental, nonprofit, public service organization dedicated to safety education and the development and implementation of accident prevention programs reaching every segment of American life.

Woodland skills practice encouraged

By JERRY T. HARLOW
Area Conservationist

BENTON - The Scott County Soil and Water Conservation District recognizes the fact that two thirds of our nation's forests are in the hands of small landowners.

The soil and water conservation district encourages and works with a substantial number of landowners, helping them practice the skills of woodland improvement. The district encourages them to use the services of the state forestry department or private professional foresters, along with planning help from the Soil Conservation Service.

"We ant landowners to have the best possible guidance in using woodland conservation practices along with other needed soil and water conservation plans," states soil and water conservation district chairman. K.M. Streeter of Painton.

Experienced soil scientists provide a soils map and interpretations to the district conservationist and the farm forester who can interpret for the landowner the suitability of his land for kinds of trees, wood crop production, and for possible economic returns. Indeed, many owners of small farm forests can become aware of the potential value of their work when they take part in developing land use treatment to bring about the most effective use of all their land.

The small woodlands and their potential worth to the farmer should not be underestimated. Small woodlands total approximately 165 million acres and amount to more than one-third of the commercial woodlands in the United States. Small privately owned woodlots in Missouri total approximately 13 million acres, and amount to 56 per cent total forest land in the state.

It is important that we remember the landowner's primary resource is the soil. What he does with it depends on the soil he has, what it is best suited for, and his own personal preferences.

Tests show small beef cows more efficient

COLUMBIA — When it comes to profit making, beef cow size doesn't mean very much.

The fact is, recent University of Missouri-Columbia research showed that smaller cows were pound- for-pound more efficient producers of weaning weight beef calves.

Harley Turner and G. B. Thompson, UMC animal husbandry researchers, compared the "energetic efficiency" of cows averaging 1155 pounds with those averaging 924.

The big cows produced 30-40 pound heavier calves at weaning time. But based on what the cows ate, their calves should have been 66 pounds bigger to be as efficient as the small cows.

"The big cows ate 4,347 lbs of TDN over a year, compared with 3,769 for the smaller cows," reported Turner. "We could have fed 115 small cows with what it took to feed 100 of the large ones."

Turner noted that while energetic efficiency usually favors the small cow, big ones will generally fare better in some respects. For example, salvage value and costs- per-head (like labor and taxes) favor the big cow. And she is less likely to have reproductive problems when bred to a big bull.

"It's the combination of energetic and reproductive efficiency that gives you the best money maker," Turner said.

Powerful Lungs

The beaver can remain under water for as long as 15 minutes, due to its specialized respiratory and cardiovascular systems that permit storage of large amounts of oxygen in the lungs, blood and muscles.

Road contractor files $1.7 million claim

JEFFERSON CITY — A claim for more than $1.7 million was filed Wednesday with the Missouri Highway Commission by a St. Louis contractor who charged he lost money on a road improvement job because of miscalculations by state engineers.

The contractor, R. B. Potashnik, won the almost $5 million contract for improving a four- mile stretch of U. S. 40 east of the Missouri River Bridge at Gumbo in October, 1969.

The contract anticipated that the project would be finished within two working seasons, Lehman Finch, attorney for Potashnik, said.

However, the inaccessability of Johnson Island, designated by the state as a source of landfill for the project, delayed the completion date 21 months, Finch said.

High water and local weather conditions prevented Potashnik from building a causeway to the island and removing the dirt, the attorney said.

As an alternative, he bought a farm for more than $200,000 as a source of landfill and paid subcontractors $550,000 to move the dirt, Finch said.

If awarded the $1.7 million, Potashnik "will be at a break-even point on this contact — that's how disasterous this project was to the contractor," Finch said.

He added that at one point Potashnik offered to pump dirt out of the Missouri River to provide the bulk of the landfill needed, but state engineers refused the offer.

The commission took Potasknik's claim under advisement and will rule on it later, it said.

Delta Center official and wife recuperating

COLUMBIA — Chuck Cromwell, superintendent of the Delta Center, and his wife Ruth both of Portageville, are recovering in Boone County Hospital from injuries received May 31 in an auto accident southeast of Poplar Bluff.

Cromwell, who is expected to be in the hospital for the next two months, suffered a fracture of his right pelvis and hip socket, a severely fractured right elbow, and a broken upper right arm. He will be confined to bed for the next 7 to 8 weeks, then allowed to use a wheel chair.

Mrs. Cromwell suffered three cracked vertebrae, but is able to walk short distances while wearing a brace.

The Cromwells are in the same room of the hospital. "It's the most time we've spent together in quite some time," quipped Cromwell.

Bill Boon, assistant superintendent for the University of Missouri's Delta Center, will be acting superintendent of the center for the next three months.

Audit critical of actions of former Lt. Gov. Morris

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A state audit report said Friday that lack of certain records has prevented the auditor's office from evaluating the performance of former Lt. Gov. William S. Morris.

Auditor John Ashcroft's report also was critical of Morris for employing a secretary in Kansas City while he was lieutenant governor, for buying a new car for the lieutenant governor's office and for allowing a Public Service Commission employe to use Morris' state credit card.

Morris said in Kansas City Ashcroft "damaged my reputation by releasing an inaccurate report," and noted Ashcroft is running for election to the auditor's job. Ashcroft was appointed auditor by the former auditor, Gov. Christopher S. Bond.

Ashcroft is a Republican. Morris is a Democrat.

The audit report said the only records available for the JULY ¼, ⅛&¾&, TO Dec. 31, 1972 audit were financial records found in the state records and archives center.

Morris said the director of planning and construction had records of his work as a member of the Board of Public Buildings and other records were left in the governor's office.

A fulltime secretary in Kansas City was hired by Morris and paid $25,266 during the 3½ years of the audit period, the report said. The report said available information did not support the need for a secretary outside of Jefferson City.

Office space was provided for the secretary by Morris' law firm while a fulltime secretary and part-time assistants also were employed in Jefferson City, the report said.

Morris said it was traditional for any lieutenant governor who lives outside Jefferson City to employ a secretary in his home city. He said he retained his home in Kansas City because the lieutenant governor's job is a part-time one as evidenced by the low $16,000 annual salary.

Ashcroft's report said there was no need for the leasing of a luxury car at $300 a month during six months of 1969 when the lieutenant governor's office also had a state-owned car.

The state car was traded in on a 1970 Cadillac contrary to an executive order which prohibited trading of replacement cars to a commercial firm.

Diplomatic informants said U.S.-supplied nuclear fuels and reactors would be for "totally peaceful purposes."

Nixon signed the agreement with Sadat just before departing for Saudi Arabia after a triumphal two-day stay in Egypt. Under its terms, the President agreed in principle to send U. S. Atomic Energy Commission experts to Egypt within the month and to sell Egypt nuclear supplies.

The diplomatic sources dismissed speculation that Egypt had asked for nuclear technology from the United States in order to develop a weapons capability.

Curtis bound over in killings

NEW MADRID — Lindol Curtis, 39, of Portageville, was ordered Friday to stand trial in Circuit Court on two counts of murder, charging him with the shooting deaths on May 7 of his former wife, Mary Curtis, and her mother, Susan Gwaltney. The murders occurred at the rural home of Mrs. Curtis on Portageville Route Three.

The ruling by Magistrate Judge Leo Hedgepeth followed a preliminary hearing in which New Madrid County coroner Gene Clayton and Brenda Underwood, 15- year - old daughter of Mrs. Curtis were called to testify by Prosecuting Attorney Hal E. Hunter Jr.

Curtis remains in the county jail under $100,000 bond.

According to Clayton's testimony, when he arrived at the scene of the shooting, the body of Mrs. Curtis was lying face up in the living room and Mrs. Gwaltney's body was lying face down in a small hallway between the kitchen and living room.

Clayton said he found seven bullet wounds in Mrs. Curtis' body and three bullet wounds in the body of Mrs. Gwaltney, which he said caused their deaths.

Mrs. Curtis was shot in the upper left and right chest, in the area between in the side and in the leg. Mrs. Gwaltney's wounds, according to Clayton, were inflicted in her back below the right shoulder blade.

Miss Underwood testified she was present in the house when the shootings took place and fixed the time at five minutes before 11 p.m.

In addition to Curtis, her mother and grandmother Miss Underwood said her younger brother and sister, Elmer Underwood, 11, and Elaine Underwood, 7, were in bed in a bedroom.

She stated Curtis was talking to her mother in the living room when he called to her grandmother, who was in the kitchen, and to her to come into the living room. He said he wanted to talk to them, Miss Underwood testified.

At that time, she said Curtis had some dirty clothes over his arm. While Curtis and her mother were talking, which she believed was about how many days it had been since they had been in court, she said she saw him move his fingers.

As he stood up, she said he took a gun out which must have been stuck in the dirty clothes and said "Now is as good a time as any.'

She said, "He shot my Mom in the side and she screamed for about 15 seconds."

Miss Underwood said she and her grandmother jumped up and ran. She stated she did not see Curtis shoot her grandmother.

According to Miss Underwood, she first tried to escape through a bedroom window leading to a back porch when she realized the back porch was enclosed. She said while she was attempting to escape she heard a lot more shots fired, and "Mom yelled at me that he was going to get me."

Miss Underwood said she then managed to get out of the house through a back door and ran to a neighbor's house for help.

She further testified on cross examination that earlier that day, about 6:45 p.m., she and her mother had left the house to go to Risco High School where she was to sing at graduation ceremonies.

According to Miss Underwood, her mother stopped the car on the highway where Curtis's car was parked and got out of the car to talk to Curtis for a few minutes.

Miss Underwood said her sister Elaine had told her later that she and her brother had gotten up and opened the bedroom door. Her sister told her they saw Curtis standing over their mother and that Curtis told them to shut the door. She said her sister told her they saw Curtis shoot their mother four times.

Miss Underwood told defense counsel that she had not detected anything unusual about Curtis's behavior prior to the shooting and stated he was acting and talking like he always did. She said her mother had not been drinking and she didn't see any beer cans or whisky bottles around.

Miss Underwood said she did not return to her mother's house after she had gone to get help but that her father, Elmer Underwood, came and got her.

Straw-grown tomatoes

More than just garden dirt goes into the bedding of these tomatoes. Ralph Carroll, 217 Sikes Ave. made big planters from the guts of an old clothes dryer, made a base of straw, then covered the straw with fertilized earth and planted the tomatoes. The plants are about the same size as those in his garden, but the fruit is much larger on the straw- grown plants. (Daily Standard photo)

U.S., Egypt near nuclear agreement

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The presidents of the United States and Egypt agreed Friday on negotiations between their governments to provide American help for a peaceful Egyptian nuclear power program.

A communique President Nixon and President Anwar Sadat signed at the end of Nixon's two-day visit to Egypt said the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission and the Egyptian Ministry of Electricity will conclude a provisional pact this month on the sale of nuclear fuel to Egypt.

That agreement apparently will take effect when the overall document on the sharing of American nuclear technology is concluded.

"Since the atomic age began, nuclear energy has been viewed by all nations as a doubleedged sword — offering opportunities for peaceful applications, but raising the risk of nuclear destruction,'' the communique said.

It said that the United States has made its technology available to other countries under safeguards and added:

"In this context, the two governments will begin negotiation of an agreement for cooperation in the field of nuclear energy under agreed safeguards. Upon conclusion of such an agreement, the United States is prepared to sell nuclear reactors (to Egypt) to generate substantial additional quantities of electric power to support its rapidly growing development needs."

The communique did not specify how Egypt would use American nuclear supplies, but it said that the program is aimed at providing Egypt

Bond favors quick test of new state abortion law

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gov. Christopher S. Bond signed into law Friday a bill regulating abortions in Missouri.

However, Bond urged a rapid constitutional test of provisions in the bill he said were "of questionable constitutionality."

"Particularly alarming to me," he said, is a section requiring that if a fetus is born alive after an attempted abortion, the parents lose all rights to the infant and it becomes a ward of the state.

That provision applies in cases where the abortion was not performed to save the life of the mother.

Bond noted than any unconstitutional section can be severed from the bill, whereas he could not delete sections through a veto.

Asked about other portions of the bill which he considered to be unconstitutional, Bond said he had no idea what the court may decide, but noted a consent provision had been challenged by opponents of the bill.

The governor said his mail, about 1,000 letters on the subject, had been running 15-to-1 in favor of his signing the bill, which he said contained "necessary regulations" on abortions.

The measure, which took effect Friday because of an emergency clause, is the first change in Missouri's abortion statute after the U.S. Supreme Court upheld a U.S. District Court decision in 1973 holding the Missouri law unconstitutional.

The state law had prevented all abortions except to save the life of the mother or to protect her health.

Under the new law, abortions can be permitted at any time to protect the health of the mother or to save her life. Any abortions not necessary to save the life of the mother or protect her health cannot be performed unless the doctor certifies that the fetus is not viable.

Viability is defined in the new law as the stage of fetal development when the life of the unborn child may be continued indefinitely outside the womb by "natural or artificial life-supportive systems."

Regardless of the time period of pregnancy, the mother's and husband's consent is required. If the women is under 18 and unmarried, consent of one parent is required. If she is over 18 and unmarried, only her consent is required.

Under the new law, abortions can be permitted after the first three months of pregnancy if performed in a licensed hospital, by a licensed doctor and are declared to be necessary to protect the mother's life or health. An abortion also could be performed after three months of pregnancy if the doctor believes the fetus would not live.The new provides that in abortions within the first three months, written consent of the husband must be obtained. If the mother is unmarried or under 18, written consent of one parent must be obtained.

Rather than consent and the fact that only licensed doctors can perform an abortion, no other restrictions are placed on abortions in the first three months of pregnancy.

After the first three months, the saline, or salting, method cannot be used.

Opponents of the bill said the only restriction the Supreme Court allowed for the first three months of pregnancy was that abortions had to be performed by a licensed doctor.

The bill also says no fetus aborted alive can be used for scientific experimentation. Anyone who purposefully takes the life of a premature infant aborted alive will be guilty of second degree murder.

Thieves take $635 from 3 motel rooms

Burglars walked off with $635 in cash from three rooms at the Holiday Inn between 3 and 5 p.m. Friday, according to police.

In each case, the occupants of the rooms were at the swimming pool

Edward Boyling of Newark, Ohio, told police he and his family left the room about 3 p.m. to go swimming and, when they returned about 4:30 p.m., $140 in cash was missing from his daughter's purse.

The Boylings were staying in room 301. Police said the door was locked and there was no sign of forcible entry.

The money taken was all in $20 bills. A $5 bill and four $1 bills were left behind.

August P. Mancus of Antioch, Ill., said $420 was taken from his room between 3:30 and 5 p.m.

Taken was $360 in large bills from a money clip and $60 from his wife's purse. The thief left behind $55 in a billfold and a purse belonging to the Mancus children.

Again police said there was no sign of forcible entry.

James B. Holiman of Champaign - Urbana, Ill., said $75 was taken from his billfold between 3:45 and 5 p.m.

Holiman told police the money was in a billfold in a suit coat pocket. The suit coat was still covered with plastic wrapping from the cleaners. There was no sign of forcible entry, police said.

Thieves also broke into the Thomas Richey home, 1036 N. Kingshighway, between 3 and 9 p.m. Thursday, taking a tape recorder valued at $80

Police said entry was gained through a rear window.

Hodge Decker, 112A N. Kingshighway, reported a police monitor was stolen sometime Thursday from a room at Malone Theater.

Pre-schoolers have funny ideas about what Dad does

This Sunday dad will be a king. But daddies are always a special people, as most pre-schoolers will tell you. In the mind of a child, daddy can accomplish almost any feat. This reporter talked with several pre- schoolers about their Daddies. Answers to "What does your Daddy do at his job?" were amusing and sometimes startling.

Six- year- old Trena Lunn says her daddy fixes broken cars and broken houses. Her father, Larry Lunn, is an adjuster for Farmer's Insurance Group in Sikeston.

Billy Jo Long, four, says his daddy works on buildings too. "Right now he's tearing down Me Ma's house." Bill Long, Billy's father "works on buildings" for Cowan Construction.

One bright- eyed four-year- old boy with a pixy-like grin said "My name is Elwood Kinder the third, my Daddy was the second. He delivers orders to southside and Ford's."

Elwood's nursery school teacher explained that the Kinder family operates Nancy's Sweet Shop. Young Elwood is already learning the tricks of the trade. He says:

"I make cookies with pie dough."

Clint Jobe says his father "takes pipes apart." Clint's Dad, Bill Jobe is owner of Jobe's Heating and Plumbing. When asked if his father is a plumber, Clint replied, "No, he's my daddy!"

Three- year- old Billy Wilson wasn't exactly sure what his father does. He said, "He's big. He has matches."

Matches may not help Billy's father, Brad Wilson who is a Sikeston police officer.

According to Christi Lathom, her father "leaves each morning wearing brown pants and a brown shirt to deliver packages in Puxico."

Don Lathom is an employe of United Parcel Service.

Although Steve Gunter works at Noranda Aluminum Co., his six- year old son, Dale says "Daddy builds roads."

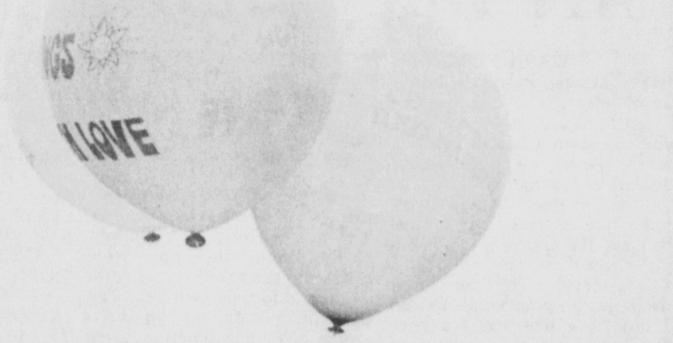

Christina Ho, five- year old daughter of Dr. Grinny Ho has a fairly accurate idea of her father's work. She said:

When a lady comes in with a hurt leg, he puts bunches of medicince on it and a great big statch to hold it all up."

Christina plans to give her Daddy a "Valentine" Sunday morning.

Angela Yates' father may have the best job yet. She said "He makes money" Jerry Yates is an employee of Electro Battery Co.

On Father's Day or any day, kids do say the darndest things.

Students attending summer school at Southwest Elementary School launched a balloon at 11 a.m. Friday, complete with a message asking whoever finds it to let the students know where it came down. The launching was a Flag Day project. Holding the balloon are Melissa Smith, left, and Shelia Hyde.

DEMULITARIZE SUEZ CANAL

One of the world's more notable ironies lies in the benefits which will come to the Soviet Navy from the U. S. operation to reopen the Suez Canal.

Currently, U. S. personnel are busy clearing the Canal of mines and sunken ships so that it can be opened again to traffic which has been blocked since the 1967 Arab- Israeli war. The trouble is, unless it is also demilitarized by international agreement, the Soviets will gain a huge new advantage in their ability to exert military power in the Persian Gulf and Indian Ocean areas. Their Mediterranean and Black Sea fleets will be able to move quickly into those areas via the Suez Canal instead of having to make the long transit around Africa or else come all the way from the Far East.

If it came to actual hostilities, of course, the Canal could be quickly closed again by military action. But barring that extremity, the Soviets will be able to greatly increase their influence on the oil-rich Arab states by their ability to quickly move and supply substantial naval forces through the Canal from their nearby bases.

Deputy Secretary of Defense William P. Clements, Jr. summed it up in a White House briefing:

"It will shorten their lines of supply. It will in a great many ways enhance their position. There is no question about this whatsoever. So if I were to look around the world and pick out who would have the most enthusiasm about opening that canal, I've have to say I believe Russia will be the most enthusiastic."

Since so many fears have been expressed about a naval race in the Indian Ocean, it seems logical to press for an international agreement to ban transit through the Canal by naval vessels of all major powers. United States diplomacy won agreement to open the Canal in the first place, so we should take the initiative toward limiting its use to peaceful purposes.

A 1974 RESOLUTION FOR CONGRESSMEN

This is the year that the members of Congress must take a positive step toward bringing the national budget under control.

The budget has shown a deficit in 36 out of the past 45 years. Federal outlays in 1975 will be almost 100 times the 1925 level, from $3 billion to almost $300 billion in 50 years.

It is time to insist that every Senator and Congressman put the national interest first and local interest second. There is constructive legislation on budget reform now before Congress.

The first step has been taken by the House in the passing of the Budget Control Bill 386 to 23. Now is the time for the Senate to act.

The proposed law will provide better control of federal budget outlays and authority. It will set firm and enforceable spending ceilings that will not be subject to haphazard or easy adjustment.

If we are to halt higher taxes, higher prices and run-away inflation, Congress should overwhelmingly support passage of this vital control legislation.

DRIVERS URGED TO GUARD AGAINST EVENING ATTACKERS

If you're driving alone at night, it's wise to take safety precautions.

The C.I.T. Service Leasing Corporation, New York, cites in a safe- driving program the following tips:

1) Keep your gas tank full and your car in top shape, so you won't be forced to stop in the middle of nowhere.

2) Stick to well-lighted roads in familiar neighborhoods even if it means going out of your way. Avoid being caught in a situation where you have to get out and ask for directions.

3) Lock all car doors and keep the windows shut.

4) You're particularly vulnerable when getting out of or into your car, so park on a well-lighted street or in a parking lot that has an attendant. Before you get into the car, look inside to make sure there's nobody hiding on the back-seat floor.

5) Before you start out, if possible, tell somebody at your destination what route you plan to follow and when you expect to arrive. If you don't show up, they can start looking for you.

6) If you do a lot of driving after dark, you might consider taking a dog along for protection.

7) If your car breaks down, stay inside if possible, and wait for a policeman. If a stranger comes along stay inside and ask him to send help from the nearest service station.

8) If a car pulls across the road and blocks your path, blow your horn for help but stay in the locked car. If you're followed, keep blowing the horn and drive to the nearest police or fire station.

"Don't worry about being late to a party or a meeting," C.I.T. says, "and ignore people who make fun of you for being 'over-cautious.' A woman driving alone at night should think of herself first. Better safe than sorry."

A friend of mine was being interviewed for a job by the owner of a small factory.

"Are you a married man?" asked the executive.

"Yes," my friend admitted, "does that make me unacceptable?"

"Not at all" said the prospective boss. "I prefer married men because they don't get upset when I yell at them."

LEAD-TIME A GROWING SHADOW

Lead-time is the interval between the planning and the completion of a project. The more complicated the project the longer the lead-time. With respect to energy, a great many people act as if the factor of lead-time did not exist -- that an oil well can be discovered and brought into production with the dispatch of establishing a popcorn stand.

The president of a leading oil company has warned of the growing menace of the lead-time factor in meeting future energy needs. He says the United States is simply not "keeping up with the game" in finding new sources of oil and gas, constructing new refineries, deep-water terminals and pipelines. By 1980, he declares, the U.S. will need additional manufacturing capacity equivalent to 58 medium-sized refineries, yet only one is currently under construction. Developing oil fields, building refineries, tankers and pipelines requires years. In fact, as the oil company executive stresses, "it takes from between two to ten years to fully develop a major oil field." During the past 10 years, the number of oil wells drilled in the U.S. has dropped 40 percent. Everyday's delay in reversing this trend increases the lead-time that is casting an ever-longer shadow over the prospect of meeting future energy needs. In the petroleum industry, the oil company official warns that reversal of the trend, "... will only be forthcoming if there is a totally different public attitude towards drilling and an economic climate encouraging risk investment."

That harmless sounding expression -- lead-time -- could be the Achilles' heel of our energy-based civilization. Our people had better wake up and learn what it means.

FUNDAMENTAL DIFFERENCE

Recent news dispatches present an interesting comparison between the state-run economy of the USSR and the nominally free enterprise economy of the United States. One dispatch from the Soviet reports on the failure of the government managers of Russia's consumer goods industry to meet the consunmer's needs. Outdated machinery has slowed up production. Also, Soviet plants are turning out "... products that are not appropriate to current demands."

Another news release summarizes the views expressed by a representative of a large trading stamp company, Ms. Elaine Pitts of Sperry & Hutchinson Co. Commenting on business attitudes, she said: "Consumers are just beginning to learn they have a voice ... You not only listen but respond with positive programs." Companies in a competitive free market must either please consumers, in terms of price and product quality, or face bankruptcy. There is no passing the buck. In the U. S., companies that promote and advertise their wares and live up to the obligation of maintaining high - volume, low- cost merchandising of quality goods are assured of success.

Contrast this situation with that in the USSR. There the consumer is a bystander. One government agency criticizes another government agency for, what it considers, a failure to meet certain consumer needs. The problem will be resolved between the various government planners, managers and employees. A few heads may roll, but no company goes broke. A state-run enterprise listens, not to the voice of consumers, but to the voices of the government hierarchy. The difference is fundamental. It is the difference between capitalism and socialism -- between abundance and scarcity.

ART LINKLETTER FIGHTS AGAINST DRUGS

"Drugs at My Door Step" is a moving book about a very personal tragedy.

Art Linkletter, the well-known entertainer, was preparing to address the U.S. Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Colo., when a phone call from his son changed his life.

His daughter, 20, was dead. She had jumped from the window of her sixth floor apartment while under the influence of LSD. "It wasn't suicide; she wasn't herself," an anguished Linkletter told the Los Angeles Times the next day. "It was murder; she was murdered by the people who manufacture and sell LSD."

In this account of one man's fight against drug abuse, Mr. Linkletter tells how he channeled his initial reaction of anger and vengeance against drug pushers into a search for answers about drug abuse.

He learned that there are as many "solutions" to the drug problem as there are individuals who abuse drugs. He modified his once stongly-held belief that law enforcement alone could solve the drug problem. And he observed that "drug education" in itself may be ineffective if it is not presented in a factual manner relevant to the lifestyle of today's young people.

In his book, Mr. Linkletter describes how, shortly after his daughter's death, he addressed the directors' meeting of the NAM. Shortly afterward the Association began its own campaign against drug abuse in industry.

Mr. Linkletter has written a provocative, informative, and very readable account of the drug problem we face today. It's a "must" for every parent, teenager, teacher or employer.

When Sam was asked how he budgeted his income, he replied: "Oh, about 40 per cent for food, 30 per cent for shelter, 30 per cent for clothing and 20 per cent for amusements and incidentals."

"But, Sam, that makes 120 per cent!"

"Lord, don't I know it!" Sam agreed.

At the breakfast hour a waitress in a busy Chicago drugstore served coffee and toast to a patron: ten minutes later she breezed in with his orange juice. The customer complained of the cock-eyed sequence. "Are you married?" asked the waitress.

"Yes," said the customer. "What's that got to do with it?"

"Well," said the girl, "why don't you have breakfast at home?"

WASHINGTON — "Hey, Marge, Patrick's home from college."

'Patrick, Patrick, my, you've grown a beard. It looks very, very, very grown up, doesn't it, George?"

' Yes, it does. It makes you look like a real man. Here, Patrick, let me help you with your bags."

"Patrick, I put new draperies on your windows and I bought a new rug for your floor. And I cooked a big roast beef for you.

"Why don't you take a nice bath and we'll all have dinner and you can tell us all about school."

"It's good to have you home, son. The house has been a morgue without you. I had the pool table recovered, maybe we can have a few games this week?"

"He's tired, George. Let him go upstairs and get cleaned up. You seem so thin, Patrick. We're going to have to fatten you up."

"How are you fixed for cash, son? Here's 20 bucks. You probably want to go out and have a few beers with your pals."

"Maybe he'd like to have a party, George. He could invite over all his friends from high school."

"Sure thing, Marge, and we could play some tennis. I think I can still beat you, son."

"Go upstairs, Patrick, and make yourself at hime. My, it's good to see him, isn't it, George?"

"You can say that again, Marge."

ONE WEEK LATER

'Hello, George. Was it sweltering at the office?"

"Yup. Where's Patrick?"

"He's up in his room sleeping."

"At 6 o'clock in the evening?"

' I think he got in around 4 this morning."

"He gets in at 4 every morning. What are we running around here, a Playboy Club for teen-agers?"

"Now, George, don't get angry again. He had a very rough semester and he's just trying to relax."

"I had a rough semester, too, but I don't stay out until 4 in the morning. Did you talk to him about the empty wine bottles in the car?"

' He said only two belonged to him. I must say he looks worse now than when he came home from school."

"And what about a job? Did you ask him if he was looking for a job?"

"He said he's been looking, George."

"I'll bet. You know there are very few employment offices open at 8 o'clock at night."

'Well, he says he's been trying very hard but no one wants to hire him."

' Why should they with that damn beard? If he shaved it off and looked presentable, maybe he could dind something."

"Hush, he might hear you!"

"I couldn't care less if he heard me or not. He needs someone to kick his rear in I worked in the summer when I went to college."

TWO WEEKS LATER

"Have you seen Patrick today Marge?"

"No, but I saw him in the kitchen yesterday with his pals. They ate everything in the icebox."

"It figures. When does he go back to school?"

"Not until September."

"Good grief. You mean he's going to be here two (ital) more (unital) months?"

"It seems like a long time, George, but July and August will go very fast."

' I'm not too certain. It seems when they're away time just whistles by. But when they're home it doesn't move at all."

JACK ANDERSON SAYS: Rodino Panel Relies on FBI

WASHINGTON — At the forthcoming impeachment hearings, the case against President Nixon will be based largely upon the work of the FBI, which uncovered 90 per cent of the Watergate conspiracy.

This will be awkward for the President who has always championed the FBI. After he graduated from Duke University, he even tried to become an FBI agent.

Those who favor impeachment consider it good strategy, therefore, to stress their reliance upon the FBI. Contrary to the public impression, it wasn't investigative reporters but FBI agents who dug out most of the Watergate facts.

The White House tried to head off the FBI investigation by obstructing the agents, throwing out false leads and crying national security. At White House instigation, former CIA director Richard Halms and deputy director Vernon Walters asked the FBI to lay off sensitive Watergate matters, falsely claiming it would jeopardize CIA operations.

But the FBI pressed doggedly ahead. Early in 1973, the top FBI brass checked upon the investigation to make sure it was being handled properly. Robert E. Beghardt, who headed the General Investigative Division, reported back confidentially to Associate Director W. Mark Felt on Feb. 23, 1973:

"The handling of the Watergate investigation from the headquearters level through the field operation level was done in accordance with procedures, both administrative and investigative, that are customarily employed in any major investigative effort by the FBI.

"Among cases handled in the recent past in which similar procedures were followed are: the assassination of Martin Luther King; Capitol bombing, March 1, 1971; and major kidnapping cases such as the Barbara Jane Mackle case."

Most of the agents who developed the Watergage case, meanwhile, are still doing the sluething for the special prosecutors.

DEATHBED PROMISE: Friends who are close to the human Richard Nixon tell us he faithfully kept a promise he made to Dwight Eisenhower on the late President's deathbed.

Two days before Ike died, President Nixon paid his last visit to the old general at Washington's Walter Reed Army Hospital. "Dick," said the dying Eisenhower, "there's one thing I want you to promise me. I want you to be as good to Lyndon Johnson as he has been to me."

Nixon gave his word. Our sources say he squelched moves by his subordinates to hunt for scandals in the Johnson administration and use them to embarrass the Democrats in the 1970 and 1972 elections.

"Would you go after Johnson?" he would ask. If he thought the revelations might hurt Johnson personally, Nixon would say no.

When Johnson died on Jan. 22, 1973, President Nixon ordered his full Cabinet to attend special services. "Earlier today," directed a January 23 memo to all Cabinet members, "your office was contacted with the request from the President that you attend the Rotunda services for former President Johnson ..."

EPIDEMIC OF PILLS: The federal crackdown on heroin apparently has caused America's drug users to turn to pills and powders meant for medical purposes.

This is the import of new figures submitted to Capitol Hill by the Customs Service. The figures, are based o Customs seizures, which often reflect the American drug scene more accurately than do drug arrests and convictions.

The new figures show that through April, heroin seizures have declined almost 68 per cent during fiscal 1974, compared with the same period a year ago. Opium confiscation is down 83 per cent.

Yet during the same period, the seizures of barbiturates, pep pills and other medical drugs have increased a staggering 371 per cent.

U. S. drug companies, large and small, must report drug sales to the federal government. To get around this, the drug companies simply are shipping the pills out of the country to foreign wholesalers whose sales aren't subject to U.S. inspection.

These wholesalers ship the drugs to smugglers below the border or in the West Indies, who bring them clandestinely back into the United States in crate- size lots.

Footnote: The ethical pharmaceutical industry insists it can't control what foreign wholesalers do with the drugs. The U.S. companies, however, ship huge amounts of drugs out of the country, knowing the amounts far exceed the needs for medicinal purposes.

BASH FOR BIBLE: Interior Secretary Rogers Morton threw a bash the other night for retiring Sen. Alan Bible, D-Nev., and Rep. Julia Butler Hansen, D-Wash., at the stately Arlington House.

Outdoor torch lighting, wooden steps to the patio and other frills were installed at the taxpayers' expense. For the Arlington House, a Virginia estate, is run by the National Parks Service.

Food and liquor for the 100 guests was paid from a special Parks Service "discretionary fund," from souvenir sales. The fund has been set aside for promotion, entertainment and the like. An official spokesman said Morton's extravaganza cost $2,000. An unofficial source said it was closer to $18,000.

Inside Labor

This Year's Aristocracy: Hard Hats New Wage Rates Streaking Toward $500-$600 a Week -- Before Overtime

WASHINGTON — The new society is sooner than you think. The hard hats are seeing to it. This is their year -- the year of the leapfrog. For in many sections of this nation unionized construction workers are getting pay- fringe raises up to $145 a week per man.

Unions are "settling" one-year contracts which bring plumbers, welders, electricians, et al., upward of $500 a week. That's before overtime.

"It's crazy," said one high government official, himself such a good friend of organized labor that he was mentioned as a possible Secretary of Labor. "It's wild. It's bankrupting."

And he's among the calm observers.

In Salem, Ore., for example, the welders have just signed a contract giving them an hourly raise of $3.60 over a base pay of $9.30 an hour. That's a $144 increase per week per man working on industrial and power projects.

In San Francisco, the plumbers have just won a lump sum cash- fringe hike of $2.37 an hour -- a jump of $94.80 per man for a 40- hour week. And that's on the past base pay— fringe cost of $11 an hour.

In another California city, the pay increase in the new one- year contract is $2.80 an hour in a one- year "agreement" -- the equivalent of a $112 weekly raise.

In Alaska, the Teamsters are demanding a $140 weekly increase for pipeline-relatedwork.

Other contractors signing up for about $1-an- hour increase per worker consider themselves lucky. That's $40 a week. But word from the West is speeding east. Strikes are busting out all over since it's June.

The federal mediation service has asked for some $3 million additional to hire 24 new conciliators -- and say the construction industry will keep them busy.

Could be. It's not only money the local unions ask for -- they demand prepaid car insurance, legal services and double time for overtime. In some areas this could bring wage- fringe labor construction costs to $30 an hour (unless it's Saturday or Sunday work which could go triple time). On that basis it would be cheaper to air- condition the Sahara and stake out there.

And there are no controls. Chances are there won't be. So the local building and construction trades union business agents and presidents are heeding the call of the wild -- the comparatively new rank and file. These young fellows for some three years have been under the control and reasoning of the Construction Industry Stabilization Committee (CISC). It's dead. No one even gave it a fine funeral. They just hung crepe paper on its door.

CISC was a tripartite talk-it- over council which approved or disapproved new wage rates. On it sat national union chiefs, the representatives of the $136 billion (annually) construction industry and movernment men. They met regularly. Now its brilliant young chairman Prof. D. Q. Mills, is going home to M. I. T.

He'll be upstream from the Dean, Harvard's returning progeny, John Dunlop. They tried to keep the dam from breaking. But you can't mix concrete with just a mixer. They have now run out of concrete -- controls. And now John Dunlop's Cost of Living Council headquarters is a doleful place. In effect, they're putting the files in order. They're set to dispatch them to the archives. And another phase of Prof. Dunlop's life goes into history.

All "phases" and "stages" are gone. Only a mere shadow is left of the once- powerful pay and price boards.

Petroleum is still controlled by the energy office. And Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Cap Weinberger is jawboning with leaders of the "health" industry in a futile effort to keep down costs which are rocketing at a rate twice that of the consumer Price Index (CPI). The San Francisco nurses' strike and the coming New York City hospital contract crisis will smash what chances Weinberger has to keep down the awesome cost of illness and accident.

Elsewhere there is talk of a "Temporary (or permanent) National Commission on Supplies and Shortages." There's a bill wandering around somewhere on the Hill which would create such a committee. Prof. Dunlop can have its chairmanship if he wishes. Then he could attempt to crack prices - and thus tamp down wages -- by rushing surpluses into a high cost area or tightening supplies in another.

But it's too late for this year of the leapfrog. The new society has it all for itself. Who else can afford it?

Mr. and Mrs. Ricky Wayne Cox

Nancy Ward bride of Ricky W. Cox

ERIE, Pa. — Miss Nancy Jo Ward, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Ward of Erie, and Ricky Wayne Cox, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jere W. Cox, 810 S. Scott St., Sikeston, Mo. were married May 18 in an afternoon ceremony in St. Peter's Cathedral.

The Rev. Paul DeSante of Erie officiated at the 3 p.m. ceremony.

The bride wore a formal-length gown of peau de soie with sheer sleeves and a mantilla length train. The cuffs and upper arms of the sleeves and the front of the dress bodice was accented with rows of eyelet lace as was the square neckline.

The bride carried out the tradition of something old, new, borrowed and blue in her attire.

Her elbow-length veil was held secure with a Juliet cap overlaid with eyelet lace matching the dress.

Sue Arentson of Erie was maid of honor, and bridesmaids were Kathy Hughes and Kris Rudy of Erie and Lisa Cox of Sikeston, sister of the groom.

Miss Deana Ward, sister of the bride, was flower girl.

The bride's attendants wore A-line dresses of lavender polyester and carried nosegays of mums and carnations in varying shades of lavender to deep purple. They wore matching flowers in their hair also.

Ted Wolf served as best man, and groomsmen were John Salato, Ron Zabowski and James Ward, brother of the bride. The groomsmen, all of Erie also served as ushers.

Men of the wedding party wore tuxedos with black and white checked cota and black pants, white ruffled shirts and black bow ties. Each also wore a white carnations boutonniere.

Mrs. Cox chose a blue satin gown with long sheer sleeves for her son's wedding. The bride's mother wore a gown of peach polyester. Both mothers wore white orchid corsages.

A reception, dinner and dance followed in the church reception hall with music furnished by the Zig Hoderny Orchestra.

A three-tiered wedding cake with ladders bearing miniature bridesmaids and groomsmen accenting the left and right sides of the cake was topped with the traditional bride and groom. A lighted fountain was also inside the cake between the columned layers. A silver coffee service, crystal punch bowl and flower arrangements completed the bride's table setting.

The couple honeymooned at Peak and Peak Ski Resort in New York before returning to live at 800 W. Gladys St., Sikeston.

The bride was formerly employed as a receptionist at Salaro and Larson Doctor's Office in Erie, and is now employed by Ferguson Medical Group in Sikeston. Cox is employed by Cox Office Supply in Sikeston.

Wedding information must be submitted to The Daily Standard within three weeks after the ceremony. Weddings one month old or older will NOT be run.

Miss Stricker is May bride

CHARLESTON — St. Henry's Catholic Church was the setting May 25 for the wedding of Rebecca Jo Stricker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Martin Stricker of Charleston, and Thomas Brian Burch, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bernard Burch of Webster Groves.

The Rev. Michael Swalina officiated, and Patrick O'Neal, cousin of the bride, served as altar boy.

The double- ring ceremony was performed before an altar decorated with bouquets of Killian daisies in colors of pink, blue, yellow and white. Spiral candelabras entwined with greenery and ribbons and holding lighted tapers were placed on either side of the altar. Family pews were marked with multicolored ribbons along the white carpeted bridal aisle.

Music was provided by Matt Bryant of Charleston, organist.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore an original gown of candlelight silk organza over peau de soi with a fitted empire bodice featuring a high neckline and long fitted sleeves accented with circular cuffs. The entire bodice and sleeves were covered with motifs of Alencon lace and seed pearls. The a-line skirt had a wide detachable chapel length train was scattered with motifs and framed with lace. Her chapel length French illusion veil, bordered with matching Alencon lace, was attached to a pearl and lace headpiece, designed especially for her gown. She carried a bouquet of butterfly roses centered with a white orchid.

Miss Nancee Rields of Charleston was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Suzanne Zoellner of Charleston, Miss Patrice Haines of Sikeston and Miss Trudy Burch of Webster Groves, sister of the groom.

They wore gowns of blue dotted Swiss with fitted empire bodices and low scoop necklines, accented with wide double ruffles. A wide band of Venice lace enhanced the floor length A-line skirts. All wore matching accessories and carried colonial shaped bouquets of pink, blue, yellow and white daisies.

Terri Burch of Union, cousin of the groom, was flower girl. She wore a gown of blue dotted Swiss, fashioned similar to the bridesmaids, and carried a white basket filled with daisies.

Wayne Dowell of St. Louis was best man. Groomsmen were Stephen Bischoff and Robert Agee of Webster Groves and Rex Brennecke of Bridgeton. Ushers were Tyler Burch, brother of the groom, and Michael Kerber of Webster Groves, and Bruce Baum of Kirkwood.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Stricker wore a formal length dress of citron silk. The A-line gown was fashioned with a cowl neckline. Over this was a full length matching coat, delicately beaded with topaz beads and seed pearls. Her accessories were in citron silk and she wore a pale green orchid.

Mrs. Burch, mother of the groom, wore a formal gown of melon jersey with a white orchid.

Honored guests were Mrs. Mary Joe O'Neal of Charleston, grandmother of the bride, and Miss Nell Stewart, and Mrs. Maria Stroh, grandmother of the groom, of Webster Groves. They

Mrs. Thomas Brian Burch

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Knights of Columbus Hall. The bride's table was centered with a four- tiered wedding cake topped by wedding bells. At one end of the table a silver punch bowl was presided over by Miss Barbara Glazer of Chesterfield, and Miss Chris Neiswander of Afton.

Mrs. Robert Mackie of Granite Falls, N.C., sister of the bride, was in charge of the guest book which was placed on a blue linen cloth overlaid with a crocheted tablecloth. Cornflowers, daisies and greenery in a silver bowl completed the decoration.

Out of town guests included:

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Burch and Mr. and Mrs. James Batten of Springfield; Mr. and Mrs. Jackson Bales and Bruce Baum of Kirkwood; Mr. and Mrs. Larry Burch of Hermitage, Tenn.

Ann Landers

Giggling erupts at wrong times

Dear Ann Landers: If you think I'm crazy, please tell me. I am 16 years old and have been dating for nearly two years, so I'm not a shy beginner with boys.

My problem is that whenever I'm with this guy that I really care for and he begins to turn me on, I start to laugh. This giggling at the most inopportune time started about six months ago, and now it's on the verge of ruining our relationship Every time he takes me in his arms or kisses me, I bust out laughing. It has nothing to do with anything being funny and I don't know why I do it. What's wrong with me and what can I do to help myself? — No Laughing Matter.

Dear No: Laughter can be an automatic response to embarrassment. It can also be a release for repressed or pent-up emotions.

In your case, it's probably a combination of guilt (for getting turned on) and an unconscious mechanism that protects you from going further. A girl who laughs when a guy turns her on is sure to turn him OFF.

Dear Ann Landers: Yesterday a tiny baby was found abandoned in our city. The newspaper printed the story and published a picture of that adorable infant.Within hours they were deluged with calls from people who wanted to adopt him. And this is why I am writing. I want to say a few words to girls who don't want their babies and leave them in bus depots, airports, garbage cans, etc.

In most states an abandoned child cannot be legally placed for adoption from one year to 18 months after the initial court hearing. The law (which is very unjust to the child) is set up to protect the parents' rights by giving them plenty of time to come forward and reclaim the child. During this time, the child is placed in a foster home.

What I am trying to say is this: If you abandon a child he will be deprived of a permanent home for the first year or 18 months of his life. This same law deprives couples who want to adopt a child in infancy. There are thousands of couples who want tiny babies and cannot have them because of this nonsensical law.

So please, mothers for your child's sake - if you don't want him (or her), contact an adoption agency and they will (in strictest confidence) make the proper arrangements. The child will then not have to stay in a foster home for what may be the most important months of his life. — A Concerned Social Worker.

Dear C.S.W.: Thank you for performing a tremendous service, not only to mothers and their unwanted babies, but to the couples who can give these infants the love they need. I'm sure this is the first time millions of people were set straight on this legal booby trap.

Dear Ann Landers: After having had my tummy patted three times this week and being asked such questions as, "Is there anything in there to brag about yet?" and' "When are you going to put something in the oven?" I decided to write to Ann Landers.

My husband and I have been trying for four years to have a family and it burns me up when people are so crude. I simply refuse to apologize for being childless; nor do I think it's anyone's business that we are trying. What should I say? —Temper Mounting.

Dear Temper: When clods make crude remarks and ask nunuvyerbizzniz- type questions, the best answer is NO answer. Just a long, incredulous look which can speak louder than any combination of scathing words.

Arnie's back

MAMARONECK, N.Y. (AP) — Arnold Palmer, calling on the half-remembered magic that once was his alone, charged out of the past with a 70 and shouldered his way into a share of the second-round lead Friday in the 74th United States Open Golf Championship.

The 44-year-old Palmer, trailed by a massive gallery of the still-faithful army, put together a two-round total of 143, three over par for two trips through the trees, traps, trouble and subtle terror that make up the 6,961-yard Winged Foot Golf Club course.

"I'm not interested in what is leading the golf tournament today," he said. "I'm interested in the end of the tournament. It was not my goal to lead at the end of 36 holes.

"I just wanted to be in the right position."

The right position turned out to be a tie for the top spot with gritty little Gary Player of South Africa, the first-round leader, Hale Irwin and former PGA champion Ray Floyd.

Player, the Masters champion who has his sights set on a one-year sweep of all the game's major titles, had to mount an incredible rally— birdies on four of his last eight holes—to retain a share of the top spot after blowing six strokes to par on the first six holes he played.

He finished with a 73.

Irwin, whose seven-year pro career has shown steady improvement, matched par 70 despite a poor finish while Floyd had to chip in three times for a wildly erratic 71.

A pair of youngsters, Tom Kite and Tom Watson—each 24, each in his second year on the pro tour and each seeking his first professional victory—were just one shot back halfway through this, the most prestigious of all the world's golf championships. Kite had a 70 and Watson a 71.

While Palmer and Player remained among the leaders, some of the game's other big guns fired and fell back.

Defending champion Johnny Miller took a horrendous, quadruple-bogey seven on the parthree seventh hole—it took him four strokes to get out of a bunker—had a 75, a 151 total and wrote himself out of title contention.

"I'll be yukking it up the next two rounds, just having fun," said Miller, the sensation of the pro tour with five victories already this season.

Jack Nicklaus struggled to a 74—149, nine shots over par and six behind.

Tom Weiskopf had a 73—149. Millionaire Bruce Crampton took 77—149.

Their problems were nothing when compared with those of Lee Trevino, England's Tony Jacklin and Billy Casper, who scored the first of his two U.S. Open triumphs on this same course 15 years ago.

All three missed the cut; it took a score of 153 to qualify for the final 36 holes. Casper had 76—156. Jacklin took 76— 154. Trevino struggled to a 78— 156.

"I just didn't play well enough to handle this course," said Trevino, who left immediately for his home in El Paso, Tex. "It's the hardest course I've ever seen."

While the scores remained high—the three-over-par figure was the highest to lead after 36 holes since the 1955 U.S. Open— the course played about one shot easier than it had the day before.

There were four subpar rounds. Bert Yancey had 69—145. Frank Beard was 69—146. Larry Ziegler improved 10 shots, from 78 to 68. Hubert Green, a three-time winner this season, improved an incredible 14 shots, from 81 to 67.

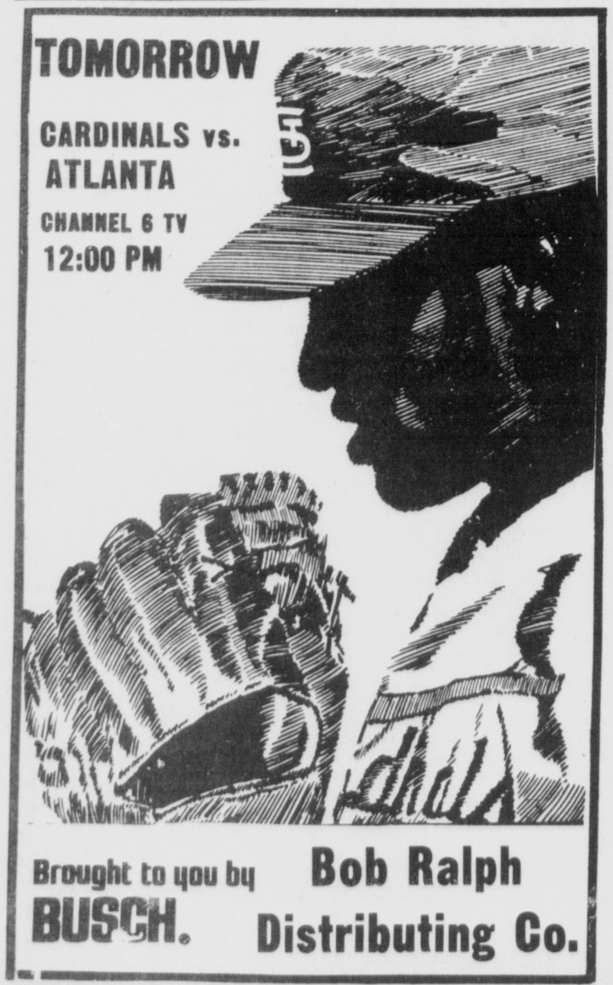

By contrast, Player was the only man able to match par in the exceptionally high scoring of the first round.

(AP) — Top second - round scores Friday in the 74th United States Open Golf tournament on the 6,961-yard par-70 Winged Foot Golf Club course:

Son chip off the old block

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Kelly McKeon is a chip off the old block at the age of 12.

Like his pop, Manager Jack McKeon of the Kansas City Royals, Kelly lives and breathes baseball, knows the language from A to Z, is a pretty fair judge of players..m.and chews tobacco.

"I've chewed since I was 6," said Kelly, a Royals ball boy. "I can't right now 'cause I got these braces on my teeth. One time I swallowed a great big chunk. It made me sick."

McKeon baseball activities became a father and son act back when Kelly was 5 and Jack was a scout for the Minnesota Twins. When he was 6, Kelly strode through the dugout after a pitcher walked a couple of guys and told his dad, then manager at High Point, N.C.:

"Skip, you better get somebody warmin' up. That guy's had it."

Kelly was a pretty good observer at that age, too. He asked Jack:

"How come the catcher always runs down to first with the batter?"

Jack kept a little black book on batters and pitchers. Kelly had to have one, too.

Kelly resembles his pop in another way. He likes to argue with the umpire. Once when Jack was manager at Omaha, Kelly stormed onto the field and confronted the man in blue.

"I told that umpire that it wasn't a strike," Kelly explained. "I really told him. What happened? He tossed me out of there.

"When dad gets in an argument, I'm always afraid he'll get in a fight. I walways drop my glove on the ground so I'll be ready to go out there and help him. I always think my dad is gonna punch him.

"You know, my dad belted a pitcher once."

Kelly had a couple of his greatest momemts last season when the Oakland A's were in town.

"I told 'em twice Campy (Bert Campaneris, A's shortstop) was gonna try to steal," Kelly said. "I could tell by his body movements. Campy went, and they got him both times."

Kelly, a straight A student at Burlington, N.C., takes batting practice by himself but joins the Royals in fielding practice.

He's quite an athlete. He plays linebacker in football and watches the pros so much he has learned how to blitz. He isn't a great scorer in basketball but "I steal the ball a lot." He was runnerup for bantam bowler of the year in North Carolina.

Cards lose

ATLANTA (AP) — Henry Aaron slammed a solo home run and a run-scoring double, and pitcher Roric Harrison drilled a two-run blast Friday night, triggering the sizzling Atlanta Braves to a 6-1 triumph over the St. Louis Cardinals.

The victory, snapping St. Louis' three-game winning streak, was Atlanta's sixth in its past seven starts and the 20th in 27 games.

Harrison, 4-7, scattered eight hits and put the game out of reach in the sixth inning with his two-run shot off Bob Gibson, 3-7. He was nicked for an eighth-inning run on Ted Sizemore's single and Ted Simmons' double.

Rick Blankenship of Security National Bank steps on third base safely ahead of throw to Optimist Club third baseman Bruce Lawrence in Senior Babe Ruth action Thursday night. Security manager Jim Saulter (back) stands ready to wave Blankenship on home if the throw is missed. Optimist won 7-6.

Littell, Smith improve season ERA records

Steve Coulson of Fisk dropped four points in his batting average, while Mark Littell of Gideon and Randy Smith of Arbyrd improved on their earned run averages in the pitching department last week.

Coulson was batting .277 for West Haven in the Class AA Eastern League but collected only six hits in 24 times at bat and dropped to .273. Gary Blaylock of Malden continued to be inactive.

Littell lost one game last week while winning none for Omaha in the AAA American Association but nevertheless lowered his ERA from 2.30 a week ago to 2.26. He has a season record of 2-4.

Smith won one and lost none last week and has a season record of 6-2 for Salinas in the Class A California League and lowered his ERA to 2.89 from 3.12 a week ago.

PHLADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Bell of the World Football League picked up two players from the Chicago Fire Friday in exchange for negotiating rights to offensive lineman Gary Puetz.

Moore's no-hitter blanks Hart's

The Daily Standard romped over Hart's Bread 9-0 and Flower Basket won easily over Rotary 8-3 Friday night in Musial league play.

McClellan limited Rotary to five hits in picking up the win for Flower Basket. McClellan and Redd hit doubles for Flower Basket and O'Neil smacked a two bagger for Rotary.

O'Neil was the losing pitcher for Rotary and allowed nine hits to Flower Basket.

O'Neil was the only player for Rotary to get two hits and Ferrell and Gore had two hits apiece for Flower Basket.

The Daily Standard managed only three hits in scoring its nine runs against Hart's Bread. Mike Moore pitched a no-hitter for Daily Standard.

The game was called after two innings because of rain. Baker had two of the three hits for Daily Standard.

NFL may strike; could close camp

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Football League Players Association said Friday the union is quite serious about a strike and will do all it can legally to prevent rookies and free agents from going to training camp.

"We hope we can avoid it (a strike)," Ed Garvey, union executive director, told a news conference. "We don't think it is good for the players, the owners or the fans."

He said a strike, if it comes, would begin July 1, a few days before the training camps open.

Garvey, with Kermit Alexander, NFLPA vice president and Philadelphia Eagle defensive back, and George Burman, former Washington Redskins center and economics consultant to the union, talked to newsmen about the three days of meetings in New York with the NFL Management Council, the owners' bargaining unit, that ended Thursday.

"We really thought when we left this room last week, they were going to give us counter proposals," said Garvey, referring to a meeting held in Washington last week. "But they just sat there. They refused to give us any counter proposals.

"Unless we get a response, the meetings scheduled for next week seem futile."

The players and owners are scheduled to meet in Washington Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday on the 63 contract demands the union made. Originally, the association made 57 demands and then added 33 more. The group rewrote them, consolidating the 90 into 63.

The major thrust of the union's demands are the so-called nine "freedom issues" which essentially would give the players the opportunity to move from one team to another after his contract expired.

Nunnelee, Ryan win

Ryan's big hitter was Green with two of the seven hits in the game for Ryan. The only hit Caproco got in the game was by Richardson.

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Notre Dame University football officials say they have apparently lost the services of starting guard Steve Quehl because of a serious leg injury.

The 6-foot-4, 240-pound Cincinnati, Ohio, native, was injured while driving a truck for a construction company when the transmission exploded. He suffered a compound fracture of one leg and will be in a cast for 10 weeks.

Doctors say they expect the injury to heal with no lasting effects, but it appears unlikely he will be able to play football this year.

What's the law?

The case of the hobbled pedestrian

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Roscoe never went south for the winter because he had plenty of winter right where he lived. In fact, he concluded he had too much of it one day while walking past a supermarket. He slipped and fell on a natural accumulation of ice and snow on the sidewalk and broke one of his legs.

Hobling off to court, Roscoe sued the owner of the supermarket for his injury.

"He hasn't got a leg to stand on," responded the supermarket owner in court. "It's not my fault because it snows. What's more, I don't even own the sidewalk. The city does. Consequently, if Roscoe wants to sue somebody, he's got to sue the city."

"That's not so." insisted Roscoe. "There's an ordinance that requires abutting property owners to remove all snow and ice from in front of their premises. And," concluded Roscoe, "since the supermarket violated that ordinance. that's the premise under which the supermarket is liable."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE. would you make the supermarket owner pay gobling Roscoe for his injuries?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that there is no common- law duty on abutting property owners to remove the natural accumulation of snow and ice on city- owned sidewalks in front of their premises. City ordinances requireing such removal, noted the judge, are intended for the benefit of the city and not for the protection of individual travelers.

Department of Agriculture recently announced that specifications applicable to bale packaging materials for cotton tendered to Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) under its cotton loan program will be continued for the 1974 crop of cotton. (On November 21, 1973, the Department announced CCC specifications would be continued for the 1974 crop).

This action will provide the same specifications for the 1975 crop as will apply to the 1974 crop, augmented or amended by any additions or changes as may be recommended by the cotton industry bale packaging committee and approved by CCC.

Department officials noted that the action announced recently is consonant with testimony before the House Cotton Subcommittee, at its hearings held April 22 through 29. As a followup to the hearings, it is expected that a joint government- industry study group will be established to give further consideration to some of the items covered at the hearings. One area for further study is whether the cotton industry could maintain adequate bale packaging standards in the absence of CCC specifications.

Timing of this announcement will provide manufacturers and suppliers of bale packaging materials with ample lead time in obtaining adequate supplies for the 1975 crop of cotton.

Bootheel wheat ready for harvest

Herbicides suggested for bean weed control

By THOMAS A. BROWN, JR.

Weeds are beginning to be a problem in some soybean fields, and several farmers are wondering what herbicide to apply as an early post emergence weed control treatment for this crop.

Either Dinoseb (Dinitro) or Naptalam + Dinoseb (Dyanap or Ancrack) can be used as an early post emergence weed control treatment for beans. Dinoseb will give good control of cocklebur, morning glory, pigweed, ragweed, smartweed, spiny sida (teaweed), lambsquarter, and velvetleaf and fair control of giant foxtail, crabgrass, barnyardgrass, and fall panicum. Naptalam + Dinoseb will give good control of giant foxtail, crabgrass barnyardgrass, jimsonweed, pigweed, spiny sida, velvetleaf, and carpetweed and fair control of cocklebur, morning glory, ragweed, smartweed, lambsquarter, and fall panicum. Either of these treatments should be used only when a flush of weeds comes up shortly after planting. Both are contact herbicides and are effective only against susceptible weeds that are up at the time of application.

Both Dinitro and Naptalam + Dinitro should be applied when soybean plants are in the cotyledon (first leaf) stage but before the first true leaves open to expose the terminal bud. Crop injury may be expected if the application is made when the temperature exceeds 85 degrees F., and results are less effective if application is made when the temperature is below 70 degrees F. The time interval for this treatment is short and varying degrees of crop injury may result if the bean crop did not come up uniformly.

The wheat crop now being harvested has been affected by one of the heaviest disease infestations experienced during recent years. A number of diseases have infested wheat this season including Glume Blotch, Barley Yellow Dwarf, Septoria Leaf Blotch, and Rhiztonia Blight. Wheat yields have been badly reduced by these diseases in some cases. Considerable concern among farmers is being caused by this problem especially with respect to the possible carryover of these diseases into next year's wheat crop.

Most of these diseases live over from one season to the next on crop residues; therefore, they can be expected to be a problem next year unless steps are taken to control them. Consequently, it is very important that farmers begin to think about practices that they can use to control these diseases inasmuch as is possible. Some practices thatt will help to control these diseases are as follows:

1. Save seed from disease-free fields or fields showing the least disease symptoms.
2. Practice sanitation including a thorough plowing under of all crop residue.
3. Practice crop rotation. Separate next years wheat as far as possible from the preceding wheat crop.
4. Use clean seed. Remove all trash and light shrivelled kernels.
5. Treat seed before planting with a fungicide to eliminate disease organisms from seed surface and to protect against soil- borne organisms.

Additional information pertaining to the wheat disease problem may be obtained from your county University of Missouri Extension Center.

Farmers penalized for marketing wheat with onions and garlic

THOMAS A. BROWN
Area Agronomy Specialist

BLOOMFIELD — In travelling around over this area this spring, I have observed that many wheat fields are heavily infested with wild onions, garlic, and vetch this season. Present market indications are that wheat producers can expect a pretty heavy price penalty when such wheat is sold.

Many farmers have sprayed their wheat fields for wild onion and garlic control this season, and some fields have been treated to rid them of vetch. Many fields have not been treated, however, and it is not difficult to distinguish these fields. Not only are these fields a problem this year, but the onions, garlic, and vetch can be expected to be worse next year. In addition, vetch seed, when plowed under deeply can be expected to stay viable for years and come up when they are turned up sufficiently shallow. Consequently this can be expected to be a long-term problem if neglected.

Wheat can be kept from grading garlicky by spraying with the ester formulation of 2, 4-D at the rate of three-fourths pound acid equivalent per acre preferably between the tillering and jointing stages. You can spray as late as the boot stage if necessary; however, this treatment can result in slight injury to wheat, so it is best to spray before the wheat joints. This treatment simply knocks the onions and garlic down and prevents the development of seed and aerial bulblets (if treated sufficiently early), but it will not completely eradicate the onion or garlic plants. At least three applications of a much heavier dosage of 2,4-D are required for eradication.

Vetch can be controlled by spraying with the amine formulation of 2,4-D at the rate of three-fourths pound acid equivalent per acre. This treatment should also be applied preferably between the tillering and jointing stages.

Various broadleaf weeds can also be controlled in wheat by spraying with 2,4-D amine. Pre-harvest treatments for this purpose should be made from the milk stage to maturing of the grain. This will require 1.0 to 1.5 pounds acid equivalent per acre depending upon the weed species present and their condition of growth. The use of 2,4-D should be avoided during the seedling stage (until plants are four inches tall) and from the boot until after the milk stage.

Of course, it is too late to spray wheat for any of these weed pests this season. Due to the severity of the onion, garlic, and vetch infestations this season, it is hoped that calling attention to these problems while they can still be observed this season will help farmers to cope with these problems in future years.

Additional information pertaining to these weed pests and their control may be obtained upon request at your County University of Missouri Extension Center.

Crop wheat county loan rate increased

The U. S. Department of Agriculture has announced increases in 1974 crop wheat county loan rates by major wheat producing areas.

The 1974 national average loan rate of $1.37 per bushel, announced August 16, 1973, is 12 cents above the 1973 national average loan rate of $1.25 per bushe.

An increase in the loan rate will be effective in every county. It will, however, vary by production area to reflect differences in export demand and transportation costs. As in the past, protein premiums will be added to the loan rates. For example, No. 1 hard red spring wheat in North Dakota with 14.5 per cent protein would add nine cents to the basic loan rates.

County loan rates in the upper plains states, representing the hard red spring wheat producing area, will generally average eight to nine cents above those in effect for 1973. In the middle and southern plains area, representing hard red winter wheat producing areas, county loan rates will generally average nine to 10 cents above 1973. For the most part, the southern plains area has maintained a strong price structure relative to the northern plains since it is the principal supply area for the heavy increases in wheat exports through the gulf ports.

Increased transportation costs have had a relatively minor effect in the soft red wheat area of Illinois, Indiana, and Ohio, and have been more than off-set by strong demand for this class of wheat. Hence, county loan rates in this area will generally average 16 to 17 cents above 1973. Similarly, the county loan rates in the pacific northwest, representing the white wheat producing area and tributary areas of hard red winter and spring wheats, will be 12 to 17 cents above 1973.

Copies of county rates are being sent to State Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) Offices. Copies also are available in the ASCS Grain Division, Room 5741-S, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. 20250.

DICK JAMES FESTIVAL ANNOUNCES 1974 PLANS

ROUND TOP, Tex. (AP) — The fourth James Dick International Piano Festival-Institute will take place June 6-July 7. Its performances are free to the public.

This year there will be performances and seminars by Maureen Forrester, Canadian contralto; Jerzy Marchwinski, Polish accompanist; the Cleveland String Quartet, and the Houston Symphony.

Vladimir Viardo, 1973 winner of the Van Cliburn International Piano Competition, is scheduled to perform.

Producers check disaster payment

Producers in Scott County are checking thoroughly into the disaster payment provisions of the 1974 feed grain, wheat, and cotton programs administered by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS).

"We want to do all we can to explain how producers become eligible for prevented planting and low yield payments," said Kenneth E. Vowels Executive Director of the Scott County ASCS office. Prevented planting means that the farmer is unable to plant because a severe natural disaster striking at planting time prevented him from planting. Low yield is when when a disaster seriously affects the potential yield of a crop after planting.

In the case of wheat and feed grains, if the producer is prevented by a disaster from planting an acreage of annual nonconserving crop at least equal to the sum of his wheat and feed grain allotments, he may qualify for a prevented planting payment.

The cotton provisions of the disaster program differ from the foregoing provisions. To qualify for payment the producer of upland cotton must only be prevented from planting cotton itself.

Low yield payments apply only to program crops of wheat, corn, grain sorghum, barley and cotton that have been planted, but a natural disaster such as jail, excessive rainfall, extended drought, or flood totally destroys the crop or reduces the potential yield substantial below normal.

Vowels emphasized that if a disaster prevents a farmer from planting his crop acreages or severly damages a planted program crop acreage after planting, he should immediately report it to the ASCS office. Participation in these programs is open to all farmers regardless of race, color, creed, sex, or national origin, and an intention to participate must be filed by July 15 to be accepted.

Farmers still benefit from sign-up

"Although there are no farm set-aside payments, farmers can still benefit from sign-up this year," Kenneth Vowels, executive director of the Scott County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS), said recently.

Farmer sign-ups and certification can be completed in one step. Crops must be certified before harvest, and the cutoff date is July 15, Vowels said.

Acreage certification in the wheat, feed grain and cotton programs make farmers eligible for benefits that include eligiblity for commodity loans and facility loans.

The program also offers a new disaster payment provision. The Department of Agriculture, under certain conditions, will make payments for prevented planting and for yield losses due to bad weather or other natural disasters. Disaster payments cover wheat, feed grain and upland cotton only.

Farmers who anticipate a low yield on feed grains, wheat, or cotton should visit the county ASCS office in Benton and file an application for disaster credit.

Dinner honors Stoddard Co. conservationist

Harry Barker, of Dexter Route Three, district conservationist off Stoddard County, was honored June 8 with a dinner at Two Tony's Restaurant.

Howard Taylor, toastmaster, reviewed Barker's career in the soil conservation service which began in 1942. Taylor said Barker was indeed "Mr. Conservation", stating his dedication and belief in the soil conservation program "were inspirational to those associated with him."

Barker was also presented several gifts.

Farm Safety Week to be July 25-31

CHICAGO — President Richard M. Nixon has proclaimed that July 25-31, 1974 shall be dedicated to the observance of National Farm Safety Week. This marks the 31st consecutive year in which this annual national safety activity co-sponsored by the National Safety Council (NSC) and the U. S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) has been observed.

Farm Safety Week was initiated during World War II to attack accident losses that were impairing crucial agricultural production. Thus, the two-fold purpose of Farm Safety Week is to call attention to major accident problems that drain human and economic resources in agricultural production, and to suggest preventive measures which can be applied to reduce these losses.

Accidents claimed the lives of about 6,000 farm and ranch residents last year. Approximately half of these were victims of motor- vehicle mishaps. Another one-fourth were in accidental agricultural work deaths. About 500,000 farm residents suffered disabling injuries last year.

The cost of these accidents, including farm fires, totaled $2.75 billion in 1973. Losses that farm and ranch people can ill-afford.

About one-fourth of all work- related injuries reported in a recent NSC ten-state farm accident survey were attributed to falls. Work falls often occur in the use of farm equipment - especially tractors, wagons, and combines. But not all falls are work- related. Many additional falls occur right around the house and yard - on ladders, down stairs, on slippery surfaces, and over hidden obstacles.

Consequently, NSC and USDA are emphasizing prevention of farm falls in this year's observance to help reduce farm deaths and injuries. And agricultural communicators, farm and rural youth organizations, rural safety leaders, agri- business, extension, and other community leaders are being asked to cooperate in this year's effort to reduce farm falls.

The National Safety Council, based in Chicago, is a nongovernmental, nonprofit, public service organization dedicated to safety education and the development and implementation of accident prevention programs reaching every segment of American life.

Woodland skills practice encouraged

By JERRY T. HARLOW
Area Conservationist

BENTON - The Scott County Soil and Water Conservation District recognizes the fact that two thirds of our nation's forests are in the hands of small landowners.

The soil and water conservation district encourages and works with a substantial number of landowners, helping them practice the skills of woodland improvement. The district encourages them to use the services of the state forestry department or private professional foresters, along with planning help from the Soil Conservation Service.

"We ant landowners to have the best possible guidance in using woodland conservation practices along with other needed soil and water conservation plans," states soil and water conservation district chairman. K.M. Streeter of Painton.

Experienced soil scientists provide a soils map and interpretations to the district conservationist and the farm forester who can interpret for the landowner the suitability of his land for kinds of trees, wood crop production, and for possible economic returns. Indeed, many owners of small farm forests can become aware of the potential value of their work when they take part in developing land use treatment to bring about the most effective use of all their land.

The small woodlands and their potential worth to the farmer should not be underestimated. Small woodlands total approximately 165 million acres and amount to more than one-third of the commercial woodlands in the United States. Small privately owned woodlots in Missouri total approximately 13 million acres, and amount to 56 per cent total forest land in the state.

It is important that we remember the landowner's primary resource is the soil. What he does with it depends on the soil he has, what it is best suited for, and his own personal preferences.

Tests show small beef cows more efficient

COLUMBIA — When it comes to profit making, beef cow size doesn't mean very much.

The fact is, recent University of Missouri-Columbia research showed that smaller cows were pound- for-pound more efficient producers of weaning weight beef calves.

Harley Turner and G. B. Thompson, UMC animal husbandry researchers, compared the "energetic efficiency" of cows averaging 1155 pounds with those averaging 924.

The big cows produced 30-40 pound heavier calves at weaning time. But based on what the cows ate, their calves should have been 66 pounds bigger to be as efficient as the small cows.

"The big cows ate 4,347 lbs of TDN over a year, compared with 3,769 for the smaller cows," reported Turner. "We could have fed 115 small cows with what it took to feed 100 of the large ones."

Turner noted that while energetic efficiency usually favors the small cow, big ones will generally fare better in some respects. For example, salvage value and costs- per-head (like labor and taxes) favor the big cow. And she is less likely to have reproductive problems when bred to a big bull.

"It's the combination of energetic and reproductive efficiency that gives you the best money maker," Turner said.

Road contractor files $1.7 million claim

JEFFERSON CITY — A claim for more than $1.7 million was filed Wednesday with the Missouri Highway Commission by a St. Louis contractor who charged he lost money on a road improvement job because of miscalculations by state engineers.

The contractor, R. B. Potashnik, won the almost $5 million contract for improving a four- mile stretch of U. S. 40 east of the Missouri River Bridge at Gumbo in October, 1969.

The contract anticipated that the project would be finished within two working seasons, Lehman Finch, attorney for Potashnik, said.

However, the inaccessability of Johnson Island, designated by the state as a source of landfill for the project, delayed the completion date 21 months, Finch said.

High water and local weather conditions prevented Potashnik from building a causeway to the island and removing the dirt, the attorney said.

As an alternative, he bought a farm for more than $200,000 as a source of landfill and paid subcontractors $550,000 to move the dirt, Finch said.

If awarded the $1.7 million, Potashnik "will be at a break-even point on this contact — that's how disasterous this project was to the contractor," Finch said.

He added that at one point Potashnik offered to pump dirt out of the Missouri River to provide the bulk of the landfill needed, but state engineers refused the offer.

The commission took Potasknik's claim under advisement and will rule on it later, it said.

Delta Center official and wife recuperating

COLUMBIA — Chuck Cromwell, superintendent of the Delta Center, and his wife Ruth both of Portageville, are recovering in Boone County Hospital from injuries received May 31 in an auto accident southeast of Poplar Bluff.

Cromwell, who is expected to be in the hospital for the next two months, suffered a fracture of his right pelvis and hip socket, a severely fractured right elbow, and a broken upper right arm. He will be confined to bed for the next 7 to 8 weeks, then allowed to use a wheel chair.

Mrs. Cromwell suffered three cracked vertebrae, but is able to walk short distances while wearing a brace.

The Cromwells are in the same room of the hospital. "It's the most time we've spent together in quite some time," quipped Cromwell.

Bill Boon, assistant superintendent for the University of Missouri's Delta Center, will be acting superintendent of the center for the next three months.

Audit critical of actions of former Lt. Gov. Morris

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A state audit report said Friday that lack of certain records has prevented the auditor's office from evaluating the performance of former Lt. Gov. William S. Morris.

Auditor John Ashcroft's report also was critical of Morris for employing a secretary in Kansas City while he was lieutenant governor, for buying a new car for the lieutenant governor's office and for allowing a Public Service Commission employe to use Morris' state credit card.

Morris said in Kansas City Ashcroft "damaged my reputation by releasing an inaccurate report," and noted Ashcroft is running for election to the auditor's job. Ashcroft was appointed auditor by the former auditor, Gov. Christopher S. Bond.

Ashcroft is a Republican. Morris is a Democrat.

The audit report said the only records available for the JULY ¼, ⅛&¾&, TO Dec. 31, 1972 audit were financial records found in the state records and archives center.

Morris said the director of planning and construction had records of his work as a member of the Board of Public Buildings and other records were left in the governor's office.

A fulltime secretary in Kansas City was hired by Morris and paid $25,266 during the 3½ years of the audit period, the report said. The report said available information did not support the need for a secretary outside of Jefferson City.

Office space was provided for the secretary by Morris' law firm while a fulltime secretary and part-time assistants also were employed in Jefferson City, the report said.

Morris said it was traditional for any lieutenant governor who lives outside Jefferson City to employ a secretary in his home city. He said he retained his home in Kansas City because the lieutenant governor's job is a part-time one as evidenced by the low $16,000 annual salary.

Ashcroft's report said there was no need for the leasing of a luxury car at $300 a month during six months of 1969 when the lieutenant governor's office also had a state-owned car.

The state car was traded in on a 1970 Cadillac contrary to an executive order which prohibited trading of replacement cars to a commercial firm.

Diplomatic informants said U.S.-supplied nuclear fuels and reactors would be for "totally peaceful purposes."

Nixon signed the agreement with Sadat just before departing for Saudi Arabia after a triumphal two-day stay in Egypt. Under its terms, the President agreed in principle to send U. S. Atomic Energy Commission experts to Egypt within the month and to sell Egypt nuclear supplies.

The diplomatic sources dismissed speculation that Egypt had asked for nuclear technology from the United States in order to develop a weapons capability.
